STUDENTS INVITED TO JOIN IN MUSIC APPRECIATION PROGRAM

All schools in Yancey county are invited to take part in the Farmers Federation Music Appreciation programs this year. James G. K. McClure, president, announced. There is no expense to the schools, he added; the only requirement is that each room or school provide their own radio.

For the past three years boys and girls in Buncombe county and Asheville have enjoyed the programs, and through them have learned something about the great music of the world. The overall purpose of the programs is to open a new door to pleasure for the boys and girls. If they learn to love the classics, they will get inspiration and enjoyment from them as long as they live.

The programs begin October 7, with a story "One String Fiddle". On the next two succeeding Mondays the life and music of Stephen Foster will be dramatized by a group of Asheville actors under direction of Clarence Sumner.

Study note booklets will be provided by the Coca Cola Company and distributed to each student above the third grade before the program of October 28, in order that the pupils may follow words in their books as they are sung over the radio.

WWNC will broadcast the programs Monday at 9:30 to 10:00 o'clock. The same program, designed for pupils above the third grade, will be broadcast over WISE at 1:15 to 1:45 the same day. A program for children through the third grade will be broadcast over WISE at 11:30 to 11:45.

The idea, originated by Bob Brown, editor of the Farmers Federation News, is said to be unique. The world's finest music, on Victor, Columbia, and Capitol records is used. The Farmers Federation contributes the time necessary to prepare the programs, the radio stations contribute the time on the air, and the Coca Cola company of Asheville contributes the study books.

Last year the North Carolina Symphony program was studied over the air before the appearance of the orchestra in Asheville. As a result, 8,000 children heard the concert—the largest crowd to which the Symphony ever played.

FSA DEMONSTRATION

A number of FSA homemakers met Wednesday, Sept. 4 at the home of Mrs. Jack McLaughlin to see a demonstration on canning with pressure cooker by Miss Irene Edwards, home supervisor.

All methods in using pressure cookers was discussed during the meeting. Mrs. McLaughlin recently purchased a pressure cooker and the homemakers were amazed at the amount of time saved in canning.

"It's just hard to believe you can cook beans 35 minutes to a quart, instead of four hours like I have always done", remarked Mrs. McLaughlin.
