Indian Drama Will Be Given This Summer

Asheville.—"Unto These Hills—A Drama of the Cherokees" will be the title of the Cherokee Indian drama to open July 1 on the Qualla Indian Reservation, and which will depict the history of this colorful Western North Carolina tribe.

The name was selected by the Cherokee Historical Association on January 31 at a meeting in Asheville. Though the title is long, the association explained that it leaves no question as to what it stands for. "Unto These Hills" was chosen because it was the by-word of Indians who looked to the Smoky Mountains for security and shelter at the time the Cherokees were being forcibly moved west.

With an underlying theme of the Indians' fortitude and faith, the drama will relate the Cherokee history from the time of DeSoto's expedition through the forcible removal. Samuel Selden, director of the Carolina Playmakers of the University of North Carolina, will direct the drama; Harry Davis, assistant Carolina Playmakers' director, will be associate director; and Kermit Hunter, instructor in dramatics at the University, is author of the script.

This summer the pageant will run from July 1 through Labor day and be an annual affair thereafter. It will be presented in the new Mountaintop Amphitheater at Cherokee, near the North Carolina entrance to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park and facing the mountains where the Indians took refuge during the removal.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fugate and sons who have made their home in Burnsville for several months have moved back to Florida. Zeb P. King who has been ill for the past two weeks is still confined to his home.

David Covington was home last week end from Clemson College.
