DON'T LOOK NOW— BUT YOUR SUBSOIL IS SHOWING

To emphasize the seriousness of soil erosion, M. Hensley, chairman of the Yancey county PMA committee, calls attention to the "bald spots" showing through on many farms in Yancey county.

These "bald spots," says Mr. Hensley are there because the topsoil has been carried away. The subsoil has come to the surface. It is like the rocks which appear to be coming out of the ground each year. They show up, not because they "grow" or are being pushed up from underneath, but because the soil around them is being carried away.

Mr. Hensley said he was spotlighting these "bald spots" not so much with the idea that something should be done to bring them back into production as to keep them from getting bigger and developing in other places. In most cases it is "quite a job" to bring those barren areas back into production but they can be kept from increasing both in size and number.

The "bald spot" is a warning that the soil—the topsoil which supports plant growth—is being carried away. Plowing and cultivating the land up and down

NOTICE

Yancey County is now receiving a free service for the disposal of dead stock on farms. The Consolidated Hide and Metal Company of Asheville will pick up cattle, horses, or hogs which have died on the farm, without cost to the farmer.

This service not only eliminates the labor attached to burying the animal, it aids in keeping the farm more sanitary.

When an animal dies and the owner wishes to dispose of the carcass, the County Agent should be called immediately.

the slope provides waterways, or channels, which speed up erosion.

Farming on the contour, keeping the land protected with a thick-growing crop, constructing terraces, and maintaining a good supply of organic matter in the soil, help to prevent "bald spots."

The Agricultural Conservation Program, the chairman points out, provides financial assistance to farmers to help them keep their land productive and protect it against washing and blowing away. Information on practices adapted to the county is available at the county PMA office at Burnsville, N. C.
