N. C. BIG GAME SEASONS WILL OPEN OCTOBER 15

Raleigh, N. C.—Big game hunting seasons in North Carolina this year will open on October 15.

Regulations adopted by the Wildlife Resources Commission will permit hunting from that day through January 1 for bear, for deer (in eastern counties), and for the rare Russian wild boar in the Santeetlah country of the Great Smoky Mountains.

The popular deer hunts in the Pisgah and Nantahala National Forests of western North Carolina are expected to be held in late November and early December. Dates and regulations for these will be established later by the Wildlife Commission and the U. S. Forest Service.

The Commission and Forest Service also will announce regulations for supervised wild boar hunts.

The quail, rabbit, wild turkey, and ruffed grouse seasons will run from November 22 through January 31, with local exceptions.

A split season for squirrels has been adopted for the central and some mountain counties of the State—September 15 - October 1 and November 22 - January 15. In most of the rest of the State the season will extend from October 15 through January 1.

Waterfowl hunting seasons for North Carolina are still to be announced. They are set by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"KING SOLOMON'S MINES" TO BE SHOWN HERE

One of the most breath-taking thrills ever pictured on a motion picture screen was caught by the Technicolor cameras in the terrific stampede of six thousand frenzied animals of the jungle, shown in "King Solomon's Mines," M-G-M's spectacular adventure drama, coming to the Yancey Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, August 22-23.

The sequence, one of the many thrill highlights of this unusual picture, filmed on a 25,000 mile safari through the heart of Equatorial Africa shows Deborah Kerr, Stewart Granger and Richard Carlson caught in a narrow pass through which the frightened animals, fleeing a brush fire, hurt themselves.

The signal for "Action" was a small wisp of smoke in the distance. Gradually it grew larger, then it was hidden by a billowing cloud of dust. All awesome roar reached the camera crews, the earth began to shake under them—and they knew the stampede was on.

First animals sighted were the zebras, always the front-runners of such a rush. Then came thousands of wildebeeste graceful gazelles of all types, beautiful impala, fragile-looking kongoni and bushback and hundreds of towering, loping giraffes racing right by the camera lens, sometimes leaping right over them.

Of the six cameras turning on the scene, four recorded it for posterity. Two proved less fortunate. One, wide on a flank missed out completely when a pack of lions suddenly appeared between it and the first charge of zebras. Spotting the lions, the zebras swerved quickly away—but their new path took them even closer to the other cameras.

Too close, in fact, to one, which was crashed to the ground and ruined under pounding hoofs. Cameraman Gene Politic dove for safety behind the barricade and miraculously escaped being trampled. One Masai was knocked down unconscious by a runaway zebra, consequently to become a hero among his fellow natives for his bravery on behalf of the White "Bwanas."

NOTICE TO VETERANS

The North Carolina Veterans Commission will have Jack C. Winchester, District Service Officer, at the Court House, Burnsville, on Thursday, August 23, from 11 a. m. to 4 p. m. to assist veterans and their dependents.

Mr. Winchester stated that there are at least four general classes of veterans who may still be eligible for training under the G. I. Bill—PL 16.

First class are veterans who served WW II and discharged after July 25, 1947, as they have up to four years to enter or reenter training after their date of discharge from that enlistment or in cases where re-enlistment made continuous service.

Another class are veterans who had entered a course but were either called back into service or reentered service. They may resume training after discharge in a reasonable time. WW II veterans who had never entered training and were called back into service or reentered service have no rights now for training under the G. I. Bill.

Another class are the disabled veterans who are vocationally handicapped due to a service connected disability provided they are entitled to training under PL 16—they may enter training any time provided all training is completed prior to July 25, 1956.

The next class are those veterans who entered service between October 6, 1945 and October 5, 1946, as they have four years from date of discharge to enter training but all training must be completed on or prior to July 25, 1956.
