Getting Into College Is Not So Easy

able to attend college because of lack of facilities. Even now, the teenagers report, colleges are getting rather choosy about their students. To get in the college of their choice the average teenager in the last two grades of high school should have his application in months ahead of the entrance date.

This might be a good thing. If colleges are taking the good students first, it puts the pressure on the kids to really buckle down in high school.

Also, I think it tends to make teenagers give some serious thought to careers. At the same time, it definitely discourages "going to college just to be going."

I would like to know what other high school teenagers think about this college problem.

If you have a teenage problem you want discussed, or an observation to make, address your letter to FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS, NATIONAL WEEKLY NEWS PAPER SERVICE, FRANKFORD, KY.

EASY DOES IT

GIVE cole slaw a lift by combining with well-drained pieces of fruit cocktail and nuts. Toss with a dressing of soured cream, mayonnaise and a little mustard.

Onion-flavored biscuits are teasingly good with fish, egg or cheese dishes. Stir about 2 teaspoons of instant minced onion to the milk

THIS WEEK'S RECIPE

Crabmeat Scramble (Serves 4)
1/2 cup cooked or canned crabmeat
2 eggs
1/2 cup milk or cream
1 teaspoon salt
Dash of cayenne pepper
1/2 teaspoon sweet basil
1/2 cup butter

Pick over crabmeat and remove any bones. Flake into small pieces. Beat eggs until bubbly, add all remaining ingredients, except butter. Cook crabmeat in butter for 5 minutes, then pour egg mixture over all, stirring constantly until eggs thicken.

before it is mixed with the dry ingredients. Cubes of bread tossed with garlic-flavored butter make a wonderful flavoring for cooked green beans.

Have some leftover egg yolks? Poach them until hard-cooked, then put through a sieve and use with broccoli or spinach to add perfect color to the vegetables.

If the cookie jar is empty, add some raisins to gingerbread mix, cutting down on the liquid to make a stiff dough. Drop on a baking sheet and bake as for drop cookies. The jar will be filled in minutes.

Creamed chipped beef becomes quite special when you fold in some avocado pieces and a bit of soured cream just before serving time.

THE WORLD OUTDOORS

ONE fishing season, coming up, check your gear, buy some new lures, sharpen your hooks, brush up on your boating rules if you are not a shore-side fisherman.

The increased popularity of the sport of fishing, combined with the availability of good fishing water in man-made impoundments have made the small boat a necessity for anglers in many parts of the country.

Here are some tips for boat fishermen:

Know your boat's capacity—never overload it under any situation.

Always wear a life-jacket. If the water will float your boat, it's deep enough to be dangerous.

Never stand up in a small boat. If it is necessary to move while boat is afloat, keep low, use the gunwales to make your movement steady.

Observe the rules of boating courtesies... and the rights of other boaters.

ODDS N' ENDS... Heard it said that the black bass seldom gets more than a few hundred yards from his birthplace? Don't you believe it. In Maryland, such a bass was tagged and released. More than a year later the bass was brought to net by a fisherman... some seven miles from the point where it was released... Do snakes have keen vision? Just how good a snake's vision may be is open to question. Snakes are probably near-sighted, having excellent vision at close range, poor vision of distant objects. Rattlesnakes and copperheads, known as pit vipers, have highly sensitive pits on each side of their faces. These pits detect sound of certain frequencies and the snakes can strike with amazing accuracy, even in total darkness.

Spotlight on HEALTH Science Features More Golden Weddings

At the turn of the century a couple marrying in their early twenties had only one chance in ten of celebrating their golden wedding anniversary. Today almost three out of ten couples who marry at the same age can look forward to living fifty years longer.

The medical progress which is increasing the number of golden wedding anniversaries is also producing a tremendous increase in our over-65 population. There are now more than fourteen million Americans over 65, and this circumstance is spurring renewed efforts on the part of the nation's pharmaceutical companies to make the years after 60 healthier and more fruitful.

The number of famous, still active men in their seventies and eighties is even today a long one. From the list one could cite Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, who, at 82, is the head of the West German state; Dr. Benjamin Duggar, who, at 75, discovered one of the most widely used antibiotics; and Frank Lloyd Wright, world-famous architect, who is still designing great buildings at the age of 83.

In the future, because of advances made by the pharmaceutical industry, there will be more men like these. Here's why: During youth and maturity ninety-eight per cent of the body's cells die and are replaced every year.

But, with advancing age, the body finds it more and more of a strain to replace worn-out parts if there is no support from outside. Such outside help is increasingly available.

Many of the seemingly inevitable signs of advancing years are caused by reduced activity of vital glands and organs whose cells are not replaced promptly. Aging bones lose their strength because of reduced production of sex hormones; resistance to stresses of heat, cold, surgery, or infection is reduced because of lower activity of the adrenal glands; digestion is often impaired by lack of proper enzymes; thought and memory processes are affected by hardening of the arteries of the brain. Fortunately, in the last twenty years, pharmaceutical companies have learned to make many of these important substances—first in the laboratory, then in stainless-steel tanks—so that they can be given by tablet or injection to restore vital body functions. Millions of dollars have been spent on research by pharmaceutical manufacturers in the attempt to match nature's marvellous production of life-sustaining chemicals.

The success of this research leads scientists to believe that twenty or thirty more productive years can be added to man's present lifespan merely by proper application of knowledge now available.
