

Now is the time to plan your vegetable garden; check the power mower; sharpen tools; repair hose, sprayers and dusters; examine the compost pile; order sufficient seed of adapted vegetable varieties to meet the needs of your family; and build a cold frame or hot bed. Your pruning chores should be completed.

The actual site of the garden is important but many gardeners have no choice in this respect. If you are lucky enough to have a choice of sites, choose one as near the house as possible. This is for convenience, protection and availability of water for irrigation.

Stay away from large trees for two reasons — they have extensive root systems which will compete with the vegetables for moisture, and they produce shade. Most vegetables like full sun.

Avoid soils which are poorly drained. If you have a new home, be on the look-out for mortar, brick, stumps and other debris that may have covered while establishing a final grade.

It is a good idea to plan your garden on paper. This will give an opportunity to locate all crops, arrange for succession plantings and assure a plentiful supply of vegetables for fresh use, freezing and canning.

Plant perennials along one side of the garden so they will be out of the way when you are working your annual crops. I'm speaking of such things as asparagus, rhubarb, strawberries, dewberries and raspberries. Plan for continuous harvest by weekly plantings of such crops as snap beans and sweet corn. Unless you have plenty of room, you may not wish to plant such crops as watermelons because of the space required for normal growth.

It is not too late to plow your garden area and leave it in rough fallow until time to prepare the soil for planting. Successive freezing and thawing will break up the soil particles and make the preparation of a seed bed much easier.

If you are a farm worker you may be covered under Social Security as an employee if you meet one of the following requirements:

If you receive $150 cash wages from one employer during a calendar year, or if you work 26 or more days for one employer during a calendar year for cash wages figured on a time basis.

If you earn $150 or more in cash wages from one employer, you need not be concerned about the number of days you worked. These wages are covered by Social Security. If you earned less than $150 the number of days worked is the factor in determining coverage for social security purposes. The employer is responsible for withholding and paying your social security tax. The above situations prevail only in those cases where the farm worker is an employee of the farm operator.

Sharecroppers and tenant farmers are self-employed persons and are subject to the same provisions as any other self-employed farmer. Records of your farm income and expenses must be kept and timely tax returns must be filed each year.

Mrs. Lucille M. Rickman, field representative of the Social Security Administration, will be in the Courthouse in Burnsville each Wednesday, beginning at 9:30 A. M., to give information and assistance to Yancey County residents on social security matters.

Savings Bonds Have A Birthday

Retiring Treasury Secretary Robert B. Anderson (left) and the new Secretary of the Treasury, C. Douglas Dillon, joined in ringing a replica of the Liberty Bell to signal the 20th anniversary of the U. S. Savings Bond program. The recent ceremonies took place on the west steps of the Treasury Building, opposite the east entrance to the White House. Americans now own over $43 billion in series E and H Savings Bonds. This is an all-time record high.

The Liberty Bell replica in the Nation's capital has counterparts in every state, donated by leading American companies as a feature of the Independence Savings Bond drive in 1950. State governors, as honorary bond chairmen, will rally their volunteer forces with similar bell-ringing ceremonies this spring.
