

TWO MINUTES WITH THE BIBLE

BY CONNORIS B. SMITH, PUBL. BISHOP BIBLE SOCIETY CHICAGO 33, ILLINOIS

CONTINUE THOU
"Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse . . . but continue thou" (II Tim. 3:13, 14)
These were among the last words of the great Apostle Paul, written in view of his approaching martyrdom, to Timothy, his beloved son in the faith.
Circumstances, outwardly, were anything but encouraging. It seemed that the last days of the dispensation of grace were indeed at hand. The apostle had borne many "persecutions" and "afflictions" and now "suffered trouble as an evil doer, even unto bonds." There were those who, like Janes and Jambres, had "resisted the truth" (Verse 8). "Alexander the coppersmith" had done him "much evil" and had "greatly withstood his words" (4:14, 15). "Evil men and seducers" had risen on every hand and were to "wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived" (3:13).
There was even defection among his own brethren in the faith, so that now, from his Roman prison, he had to report: "All they which are in Asia have turned away from me . . . Demas hath forsaken me . . . only Luke is with me" (1:15; 4:10,11).
And what, now, is his parting advice to young Timothy? Does he say: "Perhaps I have been too intense. My methods have made many enemies. I advise you to be more diplomatic and tolerant than I have been"? Hardly, for the records show Paul to have been of all men most tactful and considerate. His sufferings were not the result of a contentious spirit, but of his faithfulness in proclaiming that message which so embarrasses and entangles "our adversary, the devil," that message which is God's gracious response to man's need and His answer to Satan's slander—the gospel of the grace of God.

Thus it is that the Apostle urges Timothy: "Continue thou . . . He well knew that in this sin-cursed world the only hope for the individual is to be found in God's offer of salvation through faith in the redemption wrought by Christ at Calvary.

THIS IS THE LAW

SHOULD A BUSINESS INCORPORATE.

What are the advantages of engaging in business as a corporation?

Much of the industrial and commercial development of the past century or so has been made possible by the corporate form of organization. By its use investors may combine their capital and participate in the profits of large and small scale business enterprises under a centralized management. The amount of capital needed for modern business could hardly have been assembled and combined in any other way.

There are certain advantages to be obtained in conducting either a small or a large business in a corporate form. The principal ones are: (1) the continuity of the existence of the corporation is not affected by the death of a stockholder or the transfer of his interest to another; (2) centralized management by a board of directors; (3) the capacity of the co-owners to act as a legal unit, to hold property, to contract, to sue and be sued as a distinct unit; (4) wide facilities for procuring capital; (5) transferability of shares; (6) a stockholder, as such, is not personally liable for the debts of the corporation, and consequently, though the business becomes insolvent, can lose only his contribution to its capital.

The most outstanding advantage of a corporation over a partnership or single proprietorship is the fact that a stockholder is not personally liable for the debts and other claims against the corporation. Claims against a corporation are usually collectable only from the corporate assets.

What are the disadvantages of engaging in a business as a corporation?

Some of the disadvantages of incorporating a business are: (1) It must pay the incorporation fees and other expenses of incorporating; (2) the corporation has no property exempt from the claims of judgment creditors; (3) the corporation is required to pay annually a franchise tax, and to file at regular times detailed reports for tax calculation purposes; and (4) for some individuals a greater amount of income taxes must be paid if they use the corporate form of conducting their business. But for some individuals, depending upon the particular facts and circumstances, there may be a saving in income taxes if their business is incorporated.
