ATLANTA, GA.—Emory University's new president, Dr. Sanford S. Atwood, addressed the university's graduates at commencement exercises at the 127-year old institution Monday evening.

Honorary degrees were presented to two Emory alumni and a distinguished attorney.

E. Snythe Gambrell and James S. Peters received the Doctor of Laws degree. Dr. William A. Noble was awarded the Doctor of Humanities degree.

Mr. Gambrell, Atlanta attorney, is a former president of the American Bar Assn. and of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce. He once taught in Emory's law school and is a longtime friend of the university.

Dr. Noble, an Emory alumnus, has served many years as a Salvation Army medical missionary in India. He came back to this country to receive the award.

Mr. Peters, also an alumnus of Emory, has made notable contributions to education as chairman of the Georgia State Board of Education.

Bishop James K. Matthews of Boston delivered the baccalaureate sermon Sunday at Glenn Memorial Church on campus.

Some 875 degrees were granted, over half of them in the graduate and professional fields.

Among the graduates from this area, was Carlton Higgins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Higgins, Rt. 4, Burnsville. Mr. Higgins received his degree as Doctor of Dental Surgery.

4-H's Study Resources At Regional Meet

4-H's from seven valley states began their 4-day study of natural resources Monday, June 1.

The 4-H's 9th annual Resource Development Conference at Fontana, North Carolina, featured talks by V. W. Darter, Director of the Tennessee Extension Service, and Lewis B. Nelson, Manager of the Office Agricultural and Chemical Development with TVA at Wilson Dam.

In welcoming the 4-H's Director Darter stressed that conserving resources involved more than saving the resources. It means using them for man's benefit, he said.

Nelson said that 4-H's individually and collectively must make an effort to develop the area. Much has been accomplished in the last 30 years, he said, but much still remains to be done. Nelson also pointed out that although industry in the area has greatly increased, agriculture is still extremely important. All industry combined totals $28 billion a year. Agriculture and agribusiness equal that amount, he said.

The 4-H's at the conference come from Tennessee, Georgia, Kentucky, Virginia, Alabama, Mississippi, and North Carolina. During the 4-day meeting they study human, soil, mineral, water, atmosphere, forestry and wildlife resources. The study groups are led by personnel of TVA and the Agricultural Extension Services of the states involved.

The 4-H's have main parties on the program. Delegates from each state will make up a "What You Want to Know" panel. A feature of the week for the high-schoolers is a guided tour of the Fontana Dam.

The TVA, seven Extension Services and the Tennessee Valley Association of Test-Demonstration farm families sponsor the conference.

baby food being produced in Asheville, according to John Erickson, plant manager. The Palmisto Grape Company in Spartanburg, South Carolina will press and clarify the juice, which will then be transplanted in tank trucks to the Asheville plant for processing.

According to Jack Leaver, produce manager at the Asheville plant, grade specifications for juice apples are more lenient than for sauce apples; however, apples with worm damage or decay cannot be used. Defects on skin, such as scab, and apples which may be hail damaged, are generally suitable for juice.

Size makes no difference; in fact, Leaver said it would be expected that this would be a good outlet for smaller size apples unsuitable for packing or for sauce. "Almost all varieties will be used as the apple juice will be a blend of several varieties for uniform flavor. Red Delicious, Golden Delicious, Stayman, Grimes Golden, Rome, Limber Twigs, and Red Golds are some of the varieties which will be especially suitable.

Approximately three million pounds of juice apples will be needed by the baby food plant this fall in addition to their regular sauce apples. Leaver said, Gerber will begin to buy juice apples as soon as apple harvest starts in the late summer, but any growers who might be interested are asked to contact Gerber in the near future.

The Gerber people are pleased to be starting this pack and feel it will offer a good market for apples which might not find a ready market in any other way. Although there are other apple juice processors, the Gerber operation will probably be the largest in the area.

Growers interested in supplying Gerber are asked to contact Jack Leaver or Hardy Caldwell, Box 2689, Asheville, or call ALPINE 4-4621.

Statue on Square To Be Repaired

WORK TO BE DONE AS PART OF CLEAN-UP CAMPAIGN
Otway Burns, the galant bronze figure on the town square, will soon be getting a new sword and bugle that the statue lost five years ago in a pitched battle with second week.

The Burnsville Garden Club is arranging to get Captain Burns ship-shape again as part of the club's contribution to the town's clean-up campaign, now in its second week.

Earlier in the week, the Garden Club cleared the ground area around the base of the statue and planted an attractive arrangement of fifteen dozen Scarlet Sage and Poinsettia plants.

Clean-up activity has not been limited to the square alone. The local Lions Club worked this past week at the Community building, repairing window latches and replacing broken window panes.

Various places around town have already taken on a fresh, new look as the result of a determined effort by Burnsville residents to improve the town's appearance.

Unwisely car wrecks and junked auto parts were moved from one spot in town. Several vacant lots have been cleared of debris and tall weeds, and a number of buildings are receiving a bright new coat of paint.

"It is a matter of civic pride," explained Bass Penland, a member of the Town Board. "Working together we can make Burnsville an attractive place to live in and to visit."

Town employees are lending a valuable hand to the clean-up operation. Doc McCurry and Britt Mitchell are working an extra hour every day to pick up litter along the streets.

The Town is offering to pick-up, on the by-weekly runs of the garbage truck, any extra trash, with-in reason, which residents want to remove from their property.

Awaiting to be erected are two colorful entrance signs to Burnsville. These signs will go on the east and west ends of town as soon as permission to do so is granted by the State Highway Department.

Scheduled to be painted are the trash cans on the Town Square and several of the posts which hold up street signs in Burnsville.

The clean-up campaign may spur an interest in establishing a class in landscaping sometime this summer. Those interested are urged to contact Herbert Allen for details.

Work Begun On Courthouse Site

Evidence of a new courthouse and jail for Yancey County in the near future began to show this week. The contractors have begun to excavate the site to the levels and contours necessary for the actual building.

The Anglin residence was moved from the property several days ago.

The Z. B. Robinson Construction Company is the principal contractor for the building, with Moser Heating and Plumbing Company contracting the plumbing and heating, and Hayes Electric Company doing the electrical work.

Plans of the new structure calls for three floors, basement floor, main and second floors. Southern Elevator Company has contracted to install the elevator for the three floors.

Jailer residence will be in the main building, while the jail will be an annex extending south in the direction of the old jail building.

The courtroom will be on the upper floor of the new building.

County Attorney Bill Atkins said a time limit was set as to the completion date of the courthouse and jail. He said the date set for completion was twelve months from April 14, 1964.
