THIS TIME NEXT WEEK— The Autobiography of a Happy Orphan by Leslie Thomas. This is a reminder to a careless world of its forgotten ones and a tribute to the spunk and exuberance which see these youngsters through a loveless childhood to a useful maturity.

A SENSE OF SEASONS by Jean Hersey. This informal account, month by month, of a year, with their love of the land, their relationships with neighbors and friends and their philosophy evolved from country living, will endear the Herseys to the reader.

A LIFE IN PHOTOGRAPHY by Edward Steichen. Includes outstanding examples of the work of this famous photographer, in color and black and white.

THE DEPUTY by Rolf Hockhuth. The full, uncut text of the explosive drama complete with the author's sidelights on history, with foreword by Dr. Albert Schweitzer.

THE AGELESS CHINESE, a history by Dun J. L', with photos, maps and diagrams. Fills the long-felt need by American students of China for a single-volume history in which modern China is related to the ancient roots from which that nation has sprung.

EVERYDAY THINGS IN ANCIENT GREECE by Quennell. This is considered one of the best of all guides, well written and well illustrated, to the details of daily life in Homeric, and Classical Greece.

EVERYDAY LIFE IN ANCIENT ROME by F. R. Cowell. A most readable account of what people were thinking and doing during the days of the later Republic and early Empire. It is a vivid and competent study, well illustrated with photos and drawings.

A VANISHING AMERICA — The Life and Times of a Small Town, with many nostalgic photos.

OUR NATIONAL PARKS IN COLOR by Devereux Butcher. Brings to light some of the innumerable little-known and often shocking dangers threatening park preservation. You'll discover, too, how you and all of us can help defend these priceless sanctuaries against harmful influences.

LOWELL THOMAS' BOOK OF THE HIGH MOUNTAINS. The story of mountains — a story that reflects the glory, the adventure, the fascinating discoveries which have emerged from man's urge to conquer the giants of the earth.

DOWNSTAIRS — A Natural History of the River by John Barcach. Reflects the author's great knowledge of and love for streamside life.

TALL TREES AND FAR HORIZONS — Adventures and Discoveries of Early Botanists in America, by Virginia S. Bert. True stories which will fascinate any lover of Nature.

THE SEAL SUMMER by Nina Warner Hooks. An enchanting account, with many photos, of a wild seal and his human friends.

AN INTRODUCTION TO BIRDS by John Kieran. The expert ornithologist will read this book with the same delight as the beginner. Reproductions of full-color paintings by Don Eckleberry are superb.

HIGHWAY TO THE WILDERNESS by Walter Bacon. A sojourn beyond the Arctic Circle, with interesting photos.

RANCH WIFE by Jo Jeffers. A roundup of the discoveries, dilemmas and delights of a tenderfoot.

THE BENT TWIG by Dorothy Canfield. New edition of an old favorite which is just as interesting now as when it originally appeared in 1915.

EUROPE—A Natural History by Kai Curry-Lindahl. Everywhere the reader meets living nature, from ground cover to great trees, from insects to mammals and birds. Stunning photos by 86 of Europe's leading nature photographers.

POND SAFETY . . . With return of the "ole swimmin' hole" in form of thousands of artificial lakes, farm ponds, private pools and other unsupervised bodies of water, the American Red Cross has come up with a do-it-yourself safety post—a 5-foot fence post, small innertube, 40-foot length of quarter-inch rope, fishing pole, and container holding water safety tips and emergency phone numbers.
