GARDEN TIME

BY M. E. GARDNER

The pruning of ornamental shrubs is one garden operation which is most likely to be neglected, poorly done or overdue. Many gardeners still think that they are not doing a good job unless they do heavy cutting or, sometimes, de-horning. Such treatment results in destroying the character of the plant and it may require two or three years to overcome such severe pruning. In the meantime, the plants look ugly and their growth processes are slowed down due to the heavy reduction of leaf area.

Frequently, the wrong plant is selected for a particular location, when preparing the landscape plan for your home, and then an effort is made to keep the plant in bounds by pruning. It is much the better plan to select the right plant for the right location in the beginning, and thus your pruning problems are reduced to a minimum.

If you need plants which need pruning, now is a good time to get the job done. I like what I chose to call deep pruning. This type of pruning is employed to correct growth in such broad-leaved evergreen plants as Burford's Chinese holly, ligustrum, sasanqua, camellia, photinia and other similar types. To me, it is a sensible treatment because if you had not seen the plant before pruning you probably could not recognize that it had been pruned at all.

As an example we might consider two Burford plants growing in good locations. They are about six feet tall and have a spread of about eight feet. They need some corrective pruning but no severe treatment.

Remember that you are going deep by removing whole branches from the inside and some shorter laterals from the periphery or outside. This will require careful study before you do any pruning because you want to accomplish two things: maintain the general shape and character of the plant; and select only those branches which will not remove too much foliage in any one area of the plant. The idea is to open up the plant uniformly rather than leaving gaping holes here and there. This will admit light penetration and promote the growth of foliage on the inner portions.

Now is a good time, also, to check your shade trees. There are always some small limbs which have died due to shading. These are rather easily removed and, in many cases, you can remove them yourself with a pruning saw, if the trees are not too tall. Removal now will prevent wind breakage during summer storms and cluttering your lawn grasses.

If you have large limbs to be removed, I suggest that you employ competent help to do the job for you.

A description of said lands will be read at the time and place of sale.

Don't order a big cube V8
Don't order a floor-mounted shift
Don't order special flat-cornering suspension
Don't order sporty red-stripe tires
All that's standard to begin with on a Chevelle SS 396

PERFORMANCE THE CHEVROLET WAY

The standard engine in both the Chevelle SS convertible and hardtop is a 396-cubic-inch Turbo-Jet V8 with 325 hp. The standard transmission is a fully synchronized 3-speed with floor-mounted stick shift. (Yes, you can order a 4-speed or Powerglide. Strato-bucket front seats and console, too.) And the SS 396 chassis comes complete with firm-riding, flat-cornering suspension and wide-base wheels with red-stripe nylon tires.

Is this the kind of no-compromise road machine you're looking for? Drop into your dealer's and point an SS black grille toward an open stretch of highway. You'll find out—quick.
