

N.C. Patrol Needs Men

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Highway Patrol mobile recruiting unit comes calling in Waynesville and Asheville this week in an effort to woo eligible young men into the organization.

The three man patrol team that has been touring the state in search of young men to fill present and future vacancies on the Patrol makes its next stop in Waynesville for a two day visit. It will be located at the Court House on Main Street, May 1st and 2nd. Hours of recruiting will be between 11:00 a. m. and 8:00 p. m. each day.

From there the unit will move into Asheville for a two day stand at West Gate Shopping Center on Patton Avenue. It will be there May 3rd and 4th.

The purpose of the roving recruiting program is to take applications from qualified young men to fill 18 immediate vacancies on the Patrol. It will also provide a backlog of personnel for anticipated new positions in the organization.

Sergeant Earl Green, Corporal Dan Frady and Patrolman Willie Rogers will be available to talk with interested applicants, review their qualifications, and take formal applications during the hours of operation.

The recruiting team has completed tours of Roanoke Rapids, Greenville, Fayetteville, Wilmington, Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Salisbury and Charlotte for their search for interested young men to wear the Patrol uniform.

Colonel Charles Speed, Commander of the Highway Patrol, has declared the early part of the tour a complete success. In all, the recruiting team has taken more than 100 applications and selected nearly that many to take formal examinations for the Patrol.

Lime Needed On Crops

Soil test summaries invariably show that much more lime needs to be applied to North Carolina crops than is currently being used according to North Carolina Department of Agriculture's Soil Testing Division. Each year, soil samples taken from problem areas show, more often than not, that the cause of the poor growth on many of these areas is due to a need for lime. Unfortunately, once a crop has been planted little can be done to correct an acid soil condition since lime must be thoroughly mixed with the soil for quickest and most efficient neutralizing action. This does not mean; however, that lime need not be applied if it cannot be well mixed with the soil and applied well in advance of planting time. If an acid soil condition exists, lime applied at or near the time of planting will still help if it can be mixed with the soil to some degree. The efficiency with which lime acts will depend on its fineness, the degree to which it is mixed with the soil and the length of time it has to react.

The best guide to liming needs is a soil test. Liming without a soil test is at best a calculated guess. When a soil test is made, factors such as soil pH, soil texture, soil organic matter and calcium levels and the crop to be grown are taken into consideration in determining the amount of lime needed. In addition to this information, a soil test will also provide an inventory of nutrient levels present in the soil. This information can best be used as a guide in developing a sound fertility program.

If you feel your fields may need lime, have a soil test made now. It is still not too late to apply needed lime. Doing so may help to prevent "problem areas" or "problem fields" from showing up on your farm this summer, the end result being better yields and higher profits.
