

NEW BOOKS AT REGIONAL LIBRARIES

By: Ashton Chapman

FATHERS AND DREAMERS.

This novel by Dallas Miller is about the impact of global conflict on the conflicts of a small town, especially on two American families.

SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

This novel by Janet Stevenson is a powerful story of the lessons learned today when northern whites venture into the South to "help" the Negro.

BAY LEAVES. Reprints of the prize-winning poems submitted in the annual contests sponsored by the Poetry Council of North Carolina, 1950-1961.

PRIZE STORIES 1967: THE O. HENRY AWARDS. This is the 47th annual volume in this distinguished series. Like its predecessors, the present collection includes work by established writers and relative unknowns.

HELMETS AND WASPS. This novel by Michael Mort is the story of the dramatic events which reveal to a German soldier in World War II what kind of man he truly is.

SOLDIERS' REVOLT by Hans Hellmut Kirst. An extraordinary novel about the officers' attempt on Hitler's life. The pace is relentless, the tension extraordinary, the characterization incisive.

THE HERETIC by Alison Macleod is the story of Anne Askew as it might have been told by the maid who was with her at the time she met death at the stake. It is English history under the reign of Henry VIII, illumined by imagination.

TRUMPETS OF JUBILEE by Constance Roarke is a colorful witty study of five of the most popular figures of the mid-nineteenth century. Henry Ward Beecher, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Lyman Beecher, Horace Greeley and P. E. Barnum.

THE COURTESY OF DEATH. This gripping novel by Geoffrey Household pits one man's ingenuity against superior numbers, dedication and cunning.

THE VIRGIN OF SAN GIL. In this novel by Paul Olsen men of innocence and nature are set against the corrupted over-civilized forces of the city, bringing new insight to the natural man's incredible simplicity and purity.

THE SEASONS HEREAFTER

This haunting novel by Elizabeth Ogilvie is the story of Vanessa and Owen Bennett's love, accentuated by accidents of nature — storms and almost miraculous runs of fish—on the Maine coast.

INSIDE SOUTH AMERICA by John Gunther. Here in one rich, eye-opening book are all the majesty, muddle, romance and misery of a great continent; altogether new; a firsthand report.

THE SUM AND TOTAL OF NOW. This novel by Don Robertson is nostalgic, funny, full of warmth and power and an abiding rightness.

THE HIGH COMMISSIONER by Jon Cleary. With action at every turn, this novel moves with complete assurance from saloon to conference table to furtive meeting place. A superb entertainment, it is also a knowing picture of the contemporary world—and underworld.

THE JEWEL IN THE CROWN. This novel by Paul Scott is laid in India. The large cast of characters bring an entire heterogeneous society to life, and the technique of the narrator is such that the reader comes to know that society in the context of both 1942 and today.

WYATT'S HURRICANE. The scene of this novel by Desmond Bagley is a lush Caribbean island, whose rebel leader, unaware of its approach, is massing his forces for an attack on the city. As the wind and the war increase Wyatt becomes the one person who can save the island from destruction, the inhabitants from death.

THIRTEEN STORIES BY BUDORA WELTY. Memorable stories selected by Ruth M. van de Kleft, who also wrote the introduction.

THE MODERN RESEARCHER by Jacques Barsun and Henry F. Graft. An instructive and urbane manual on how to gather and organize facts, check their accuracy and report the findings, simply, clearly and gracefully.

THE GOLD IN THE SEA. Thirteen short stories by Bryan Friel about the young and the old, the gay and the sad, the hopeful and the disillusioned, set in present-day Ireland.

DON QUIXOTE, U. S. A. Under its comic and satiric disguises this novel by Richard Powell investigates the ways in which good intentions can become thwarted in this bad old fascinating world, and the ways in which right can triumph in a rather wrong way.

SATURDAY THE RABBI WENT HUNGRY by Harry Kesselman is more than a superb mystery story; it is a fully structured novel filled with delightful characterizations and penetrating insights into comparative religious attitudes toward suicide, drunkenness, civil rights—even what to name a baby;

THE TEMPER OF OUR TIME by Eric Hoffer dissects the chief forces working to remake our world. It is a vigorous, provocative statement by a man willing to grapple with the painful processes of original thought.

LABAN'S WILL. Dealing, literally, with the matter of death and death-in-life, this is an invigorating and thoughtful novel, by Albert Lebowitz.

THE FOURTH GIFT. An historical novel, by Elizabeth Barton de Trevino, set in the state of Jalisco, Mexico, in a time when decrees designed to destroy the Catholic church drove

WAMY Craftsmen And Leaders Discuss Co-op

The craftsmen of the W.A.M. Y. area moved a step closer to the formation of a Co-op at a meeting at which Mrs. Janice Whitener, Crafts Specialist, presided in Newland on May 11.

Mrs. Whitener explained that a Board of Directors should be appointed so that Incentive Grants for incorporation costs, fees, operating expenses, etc., could be sought; also for investigating capital needs and suitable craft assembly points in the four counties.

The craftsmen then divided into groups by counties to elect three members of a temporary Board of Directors from each county. Those elected were, Watauga: Mrs. Asa Reece, Mrs. Iva Lee Harmon and Mrs. Will Cook; Avery: Mrs. Ann McCoury, Mrs. Pearl Norwood and Mr. Dewey Harmon, with Mrs. Smith Harmon as alternate; men, women and children to violent guerilla warfare in defense of their faith.

Mitchell: Mr. Robert Seatz, with two others to be named later; Yancey: Mr. Lloyd Wilson, Mrs. Lo's McKinney and Mrs. Betty McMahan, with Mrs. Cora McWhirter as alternate.

Mrs. Whitener then introduced Mr. Ruffin Tucker, W.A.M.Y. Marketing Specialist, who advised that he would be working with the Board of Directors in its task of making proposals to the membership for the organizational structure in making recommendations for capital needs to the Co-op.
