Singing continued

This year's Singing on the Mountain is expected to attract upwards of 25,000 spectators and visitors. It will be an all-day program featuring singing, speeches and sermons. Gov. Robert McNa'ir of South Carolina has relaxed his rule against Sunday public appearances to be principal speaker at the program, and the Rev. Dean M. Neese, pastor of the St. Elmo Methodist Church of Chattanooga, Tenn., will deliver the sermon.

At least two nationally-prominent gospel singing groups will form the nucleus of the music-makers for the Singing on the Mountain convention. The latest group to agree to participate is the Southland Trio of Auburn-da'e, Fla. The trio, which actually boasts five members, is a national recording group of gospel singers.
