

Stenzel Is Exhibitor

Gertrud F. Stenzel, Southern Highlands Handicraft Guild member and co-owner of Rainbow's End Crafts Center will be represented with two of her knitted cushions in the International Art Program, National Collection of Fine Arts, Smithsonian Institute, Washington, D.C.

Mrs. Stenzel's stuffed cushions will be among 150 craftsmen's exhibit items to tour overseas as an exhibition of the traditional and contemporary crafts of the Southern Appalachian region. One of the cushions is knitted in a striped pattern of black and rainbow yarns, the other is in a Scandinavian design of her own creation.

A biography and brief statements of each craftsman will be in a packet accompanying each person's projects in the exhibit.

Strawberries Anyone?

Arthur Proffitt of Burnsville displays a bucket of strawberries he got from a small planting. There were enough berries to fill his family needs with some left for friends and neighbors. Proffitt obtained the plants from the Extension Service. It is estimated that it would take more than 20 acres of strawberries to supply the needs of Yancey County alone, so raising strawberries would provide a good opportunity for local people to earn extra money.
