

STAR IS BRIGHT ABOUT COOKING

"As the World Turns" star Eileen Fulton enjoys her favorite Old English holiday dessert at New York's Act 1 restaurant. She advises that plum pudding be cooked three weeks in advance for the flavor to develop before eating.

Carol Young, Terry McMahan Are United In Marriage

Miss Carol Ann Young and Terry Allen McMahan were united in marriage at 2:00 p. m. on Saturday, October 28 at Young's Chapel Baptist Church, Route 2, Burnsville. Rev. B. G. McMahan conducted the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill R. Young of Route 2, Burnsville. The bridegroom is the son of Rev. and Mrs. B. G. McMahan of Avery County.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long Empire gown of bridal satin, with bodice of re-embroidered Alencon lace. The gown was trimmed with tiny pearls, with a chapel length train. The bride's headpiece was a silk-covered open crown camelot with a perky silk bow in back overlaid with a band of Alencon lace delicately embroidered with tiny pearls holding an elbow length bouffant veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of Shasta daisies centered with a white orchid.

Mrs. Sandra Norris, matron of honor, wore an Empire gown with bronze velvet bodice and skirt of yellow chiffon over satin with a matching headpiece trimmed with tiny pearls.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Margaret Young, sister-in-law of the bride and Mrs. Rachel Boone of Marion, N.C. They wore gowns like that of the hono- attendant in forest green velvet bodice with skirt of light green chiffon over satin. All carried pom-pom balls of bronze and yellow miniature mums.

Junior attendants were Lesia Young and Mark Young, sister and brother of the bride.

Bobby Young was best man, brother of the bride, and ushers were Kirk McMahan, brother of the groom, and Jimmy Norris.

BOOK CORNER By Mrs. Gladys Coletta

Cambodia: Search for Security by Michael Leifer. 1967, Pp. 206. Frederick A. Praeger, Publishers, N. Y.

Cambodia is like a tiny bird wedged between the great hawks of war. So states Michael Leifer in his book, Cambodia: The Search for Security. To pacify the war hawks and to keep their good will (thus buying time and security) became the goal of Cambodia's head of state, flamboyant Prince Sihanouk.

Although unconventional in method and erratic in behavior, Prince Sihanouk nevertheless obtained good results for his country—for the time being. Cambodia saw itself threatened on the north and west by Thailand retaliation, and on the east by Vietnamese expansionism.

Since these neighbors and traditional enemies were aligned with one or another of the great powers, Prince Sihanouk sought neutrality for his country in order to effect a balance between the powers as represented by the Communists and the United States.

However, Cambodia was soon reaping the bitter fruits of neutrality. It was not long until the Viet-Cong were using Cambodian territory either as a sanctuary, or as a means of communication through which reinforcements could be introduced into South Vietnam from North Vietnam. This incurred suspicion and distrust of the Cambodian people. Border clashes resulted, as well as bombing of villages. Eventually the United States felt it was necessary to invade Cambodia to flush out the enemy. Unfortunately, the U.S. is still there, and the war continues.

Later events, after this book's publication in 1967, brought about the downfall of Sihanouk (he is now in exile), and reduced him from a beloved idol to a despised symbol of collaboration. Although he did not succeed in maintaining a disengaged kingdom, one is forced to admire his bravery and tenacity of purpose. Both Cambodia and Prince Sihanouk can truly be called victims of circumstance.

Stamp Corner

By George Cheren

Papua, New Guinea has selected portraits of early missionaries to highlight the religious aspects of the Holy Days. Each stamp has the same 7¢ value and each shows a scene from the subject's life work. Reverend Copeland King was minister to natives and mine workers, in spite of his own illness and adversities. Dr. Johannes Flier built an extensive school system during the trying period of World War I, and stayed to see four children carry on his work. Bishop Vergus came to Thursday Island at age 24, set up pioneer missions, provided for the first Sisters in the area, and literally worked himself to death in medical missionary work in primitive religions. He died at age 32. Pastor Ruatoka, a great peacemaker, was a founder of the London Missionary Society, New Guinea Mission at Port Moresby.

Jewish households celebrate the Festival of Lights. This holiday celebrates the recapture of the Temple by Judas Maccabeus, when an apparently empty vial of oil actually provided light for eight days of celebration. Now the holiday is celebrated with the lighting of one extra candle each night for eight nights, as well as with gift-giving. This spirit, as well as the season on which the holiday falls, has given rise in America to a new tradition: joint Hanukkah-Christmas celebration. Israel has selected this theme for this season. Three older forms of the traditional and historic lamps are shown.
