

Celebrates Birthday

Little Miss Traci Buckner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Buckner, celebrated her 4th birthday on Sunday, August 11. During her Sunday School Class cupcakes were served to Joel Hughes, Angie Presnell, Brian Robinson, Traci and Mrs. Ethel Fox, teacher. In the afternoon there was a small party with cake and ice cream at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hayter.

CELOTEX ACOUSTICAL CEILINGS

CHILDREN'S ROOMS: Acoustical ceilings absorbing up to 70% of the noise striking their surface will insure a quieter room... perfect for ideal study conditions or when play becomes lively.

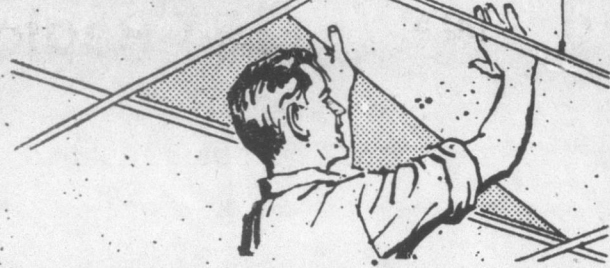

Noise in the home—distracting and irritating, has been cited by family counselors as a serious, growing problem. Today's smaller homes need the magic of efficient acoustical products in all rooms for relaxed family life.

FAMILY ROOMS: Ever heard a guest comment "I can't hear myself talk in this room." This never happens when famous Celotex acoustical ceilings have been installed. Noise is drastically reduced, making conversation more enjoyable.

In just one day you can put up a

CELOTEX SUSPENDED CEILING SYSTEM

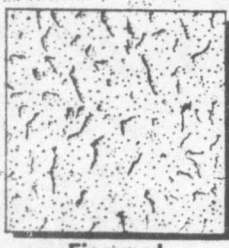

Today's most dramatic home improvement!

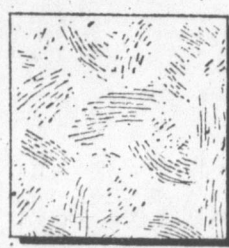

Yes, the average installation can go just that fast! And you can have a ceiling of acoustical or decorative fiberboard, or luminous (for glare-free lighting) panels... or you can combine the different types of lay-in panels for special ceiling effects. No mess or fuss... the panels are simply tipped into position in a framework of lightweight metal channels hung from the old ceiling or open joists. Instantly removable for cleaning.

This ceiling construction—to any room height desired—makes it easy to lower ceilings to modern room requirements. In remodeling, old cracked ceilings are concealed; in basement installations, unsightly pipes, ducts and beams are hidden.

Brief Stop Ends With Directorship

The more Janet Crisp passed the Guilford County Juvenile Detention Home on her way to visit her family in Burnsville, "the more it bothered me."

She wondered about the children inside, who they were, what they had done, whether they had any one at home, somebody to care.

One day she didn't drive by. She stopped and went inside, hoping to do volunteer work.

Says Janet Crisp, "They told me that would be fine, but the children were only there for a short time. I wouldn't be able to do follow-up work." They referred Janet to the Volunteers to the Court.

Janet, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Crisp of Burnsville and a graduate of East Yancey High School and McDowell Technical Institute, was the first volunteer to be placed on a juvenile case, which the program had just begun handling. She was given two sisters to work with, teenagers who had been running away from home and school.

That was in October and today, according to Miss Crisp, "you can't even tell they're the same girls. They have made remarkable improvement."

On Monday, Julie Rochelle, presently the executive director of Volunteers to the Court, will step out as head of the program and Miss Crisp will assume the directorship. In her new job she will be coordinating the volunteers and the 150 first offenders participating in the program, which has grown considerably since it started on a small scale some six years ago.

She will also try to recruit new volunteers who work with young people on probation after their first conviction in court.

Miss Crisp, who came from a family of five children, says she feels lucky to have had "such a happy childhood" and wants to help young people who did not.

In a program where progress is often slow and sometimes frustrating, Miss Crisp plans to have better interaction among volunteers during their periodic meetings. "It helps to know how the other volunteers are feeling and to learn from each other."
