

Kraus To Perform With NC Orchestra

The North Carolina Symphony has announced that Mme. Lili Kraus will play with the orchestra in Durham, High Point, and Asheville in December 1975. The Asheville performance will be December 11th.

Reached at her home in Celo last night, Mme. Kraus expressed joy at playing with the orchestra of the state. She admires the energetic travel program of the Symphony and its ability to play in many towns and small communities.

Mme. Kraus is keenly interested in the Little Symphony's visit to Mitchell and Yancey Counties this spring. She is a donor for the May 13th concert to be given in the First Baptist Church in

EY Drama Club Stages Production

BY MATTHEW HARRIS A heart-warming blend of nostalgia, comedy, and tragedy will come to East Yancey's stage with the production of Look Homeward, Angel. The play, currently scheduled for May Burnsville at 8:15 p.m. Expressing the hope that she would be able to attend the concert, she said, "It pleases me enormously that we are developing opportunities for our young people to play instruments and to listen to music. I have heard enthusiastic comments about the band concert that occurred here last week, and I hope that my contribution will,

enable some of these students to attend the May 13 concert." Mme. Kraus expressed hope that others would join her in being patrons for the coming concert to insure the success of the North Carolina Symphony's first visit here in thirty years. A contribution of $10 makes one a donor. Because the program soon goes to press, donors are urged to send checks (payable to the North Carolina Symphony) or to call Music in the Mountains, Burnsville, at 675-4060 or 675-4659 before

May 1. Since tickets for the concert must be sold by May 1st, it is also urged that interested persons buy them now through local clubs or at the Yancey County Country Store.

Post Office Expansion Eyed CitizensOpposeMoving Site

BY CAROLYN YUZIUK Nearly 500 Burnsville citizens signed a petition which was circulated last weekend by two local women, asking that the Burnsville Post Office not be moved from its present location on the town square.

The news that such a move was even being contemplated came as a surprise to many people, as discussions concerning the post office facility in Burnsville have not been widely aired.

Burnsville Post Office, according to reports received from present and former employees, is seriously inadequate for the volume of mail it handles as it now stands. Plans for remodeling and expansion have been under consideration for more than two years. More recently, however, moving the post office out to the Highway 19E Bypass, possibly to a shopping center, has been given consideration, and this suggestion has caused widespread consternation among townspeople.

"If the post office is moved away from the town square, which is the heart of Burnsville, the town will have lost a vital community service which it needs to keep its life and vigor, said one man who signed the petition but asked not to be named.

Most of the people who voiced their opposition to the idea of moving the post office pointed out the fact that the 'heart of Burnsville'' which has the square as its focal point, should and does contain nearly every public facility necessary to the town and county, and these services should be kept separate from commercial enterprises. The county courthouse, chamber of commerce, post office, county library (in progress), a bank, newspaper and church all encircle the square in Burnsville, county seat of Yancey. Ironically, the idea of moving the post office, which at present is only a thought, comes at time when every effort is being made to keep the center of town a vital and beautiful place for conducting town and county affairs. The old derelict courthouse will soon be an object of pride to Yancey Countians as its renovation nears completion, the Yancey County Library will shortly be moved into the remodeled old Northwestern Bank Building, and the town square beautification project, undertaken by the chamber of commerce, will soon delight the eyes of Yancey Countians when the project is finished. "Parking is a disaster at the present location," was most often heard from Burnsville citizens who were for moving the post office. "Why not build an entirely new facility in a location more accessible by car?"

"There's plenty of space for parking where there are now vacant lots around the post office," is the reply from petitioners. "If money can be made available to build a new facility, certainly it can be used to better advantage in planning the complete overhaul of the present post office, including remodeling, expansion, and the provision for plenty of paved parking space."

As the situation now stands, the one undeniable fact is that the Burnsville Post Office needs to be completely updated to keep pace with progress, and for postal employees to be able to handle the mail with greater efficiency. Important steps are being taken in this direction, and every citizen should be informed of decisions that are being made and aware of the effect these decisions may have on their town and county.

Extension Has Visitor From China

Many Yancey County people are meeting a new face at Agricultural Extension activities. He is Mr. Jung-huei Chen, Chief of the Agricultural Extension, from The Republic of China (Taiwan). Mr. Chen is visiting research institutes, state and county Agricultural Extension offices and farms in different parts of the U.S. to observe extension activities relating to the production of food crops, fruits, flowers, livestock, home economics and 4-H.

Yancey is the fifth and last county in North Carolina to host Mr. Chen. He has already visited Texas, will continue to Arkansas, Michigan, Wisconsin and Hawaii. Mr. Chen is a pleasant and personable person who is making many friends during his seven day visit to Yancey.

15-16, is being produced by the East Yancey Dramatics Club under the directorship of Elizabeth Westall, and sports a cast of seventeen, involving a monumental energy output.

Based on a book by a native North Carolinian, the late Thomas Wolfe of Asheville, the play depicts the struggles and conflicts of the Gant family. The action centers on the conflicts between the driving, compulsive influences and attitudes of Eliza Gant, the desire of her two sons to be free, and her drunkard husband's desire to be quit of his entire situation.

Autobiographical in nature, the play paints the members of the family in an understanding light, giving us to understand the goals and dreams of them all. As these, people pursue their dreams they run into each other, for not only do their paths cross, they meet headlong. Out of these conflicts rises an understanding of people and life that is only evident to us as the audience. The players themselves stumble in heartbreak and sorrow to the close, when Eugene the youngest son, as he leaves home forever, cries out in fear and anguish: "I want to find the world. Where is the world?"

Under the skillful guidance of Mrs. Westall, who has taught drama in this county for eight years and has directed productions of The Diary of Ann Frank, The Crucible, Arsenic and Old Lace, and The Curious Savge, the characters are beginning to take shape from the raw material of the actors. As more and more of the characterization becomes concrete, it is evident that this production promises to provide an enjoyable evening for everyone, for, despite their youth, the actors display a very high degree of competence.

The public performances are scheduled for May fifteenth and sixteenth at East Yancey High School; admission will be $1.50 for adults and $1.00 for students and children. You will enjoy the performance.

Superior Court Judge Harry C. Martin last Friday dismissed a ruling by the N.C. State Board of Dental Examiners in May of 1974 which revoked the license of Dr. J. G. Braswell, a Spruce Pine dentist.

Dr. Braswell, accused of improper conduct in dealing with five of his female patients has maintained his plea of innocence to the charges brought by the dental board. Judge Martin said the state law under which the dental board administered disciplinary proceedings against Braswell is unconstitutional.

An attorney for the state dental board, Thomas M. Starnes of Morganton, said Friday that he will recommend the board appeal Judge Martin's decision to the N.C. Court of Appeals.

Hearings Continue On Power Rate Increase

The wholesale power rate increase that was initiated by Carolina Power & Light Company on the electric membership corporations of North Carolina is now being heard before the Federal Power Commission in Washington D.C.

Administrative Law Judge William Jensen of the Federal Power Commission has been assigned this case under Docket No. e-8884. At this time testimonies are being given in relationship to Phase 1 of the hearing. Phase 2 of the hearing is scheduled to commence on May 19, 1975. However, the attorneys representing the electric membership corporations have petitioned that Phase 2 commence immediately upon the completion of Phase 1 in an effort to expedite the completion of the hearing as an effort to hopefully receive relief in behalf of the Cooperatives' consumers who are served in North Carolina and Tennessee that were affected by the rate increase initiated by Carolina Power & Light Company.
