 Fresh Bartlett pears and nonfat dry milk don't appear to have much in common as go-together foods, but both commodities have reached or are expected to reach bountiful supply levels, according to U.S. Department of Agriculture reports.
 Fresh Bartlett pears are expected to be in excessively heavy supply during August and September as a result of much larger crops in the Pacific Coast at their best for flavor and for shelf life.

 Although production of nonfat dry milk through May of this year is down 18 per cent from last year and 10 per cent from the 1973-75 average, it is still in excess of domestic demand, according to marketing specialists with USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service.

PEARS
The Summer Fruit
 Bartlett pears are the long-necked beauties whose smooth texture and sweet juiciness make them a summer favorite. They're at their peak of perfection for taste and flavor and good out-of-hand eating in August and September.

USDA's Crop Reporting service forecasts a California Bartlett pear crop of 345,000 tons. Washington and Oregon crops, coming to harvest in mid-August, are anticipated to reach a total of 196,000 tons. The total for the three Pacific Coast states is expected to be 7 per cent higher than the utilized production of 1975 and 9 per cent above 1974.

With conservative contracting by canners, bountiful supplies of fresh Bartlett pears will be on the fresh fruit market throughout the summer and early fall.

NONFAT DRY MILK
 Nonfat dry milk has been labelled a miracle worker, a good camping companion, a money saver, a nutritional boost and a lot of other good things. Its virtues are many: instant availability, ease in liquefying, and ease in storing. Commercial uses for baked goods, ice cream sherbets have been known for

Popular Feature At Tweetsie

A mother shows her son how gentle this White European Falow is by letting the deer eat out of her hand. The deer is one of 48, including six fawn, at Tweetsie Railroad's new Deer Park and Animal Farm. Lilly the lamb, left, is one of several other species of animals in the park. Ten French Sheep, two African Pigmy Goats, a variety of exotic chickens, and the more domesticated animals such as rabbits, ducks, and pigs have made this attraction one of the most popular at Tweetsie this summer.

Micaville High Class Of 45 Reunion

The 1945 Graduating Class of Micaville High School met June 26 at 7:30 p.m. in the school auditorium for a Class Reunion.

Decorations were planned around a Bicentennial theme and the class colors (blue and white) and class flowers (red and white roses).

A large Welcome Class of '45' poster was displayed on the bulletin board in the front hall. The stage was decorated with a trellis of red roses and greenery with flanking branches of ivy. Posters of the class colors, flowers, and motto were arranged on either side of the trellis with small United States flags on each poster. A large United States flag and

Christian flag were on opposite sides of the curtains with an arrangement of greenery in the center stage and vases of red roses on either side of the flags. The piano was decorated with a lovely arrangement of three tea roses and two white candles in attractive wooden candle holders. In the center of the refreshment table was an arrangement of red roses with two white roses in memory of two class members who have passed away: Lewis Fortner and Alvin Westall. On opposite sides of the arrangement of roses were red, white and blue candles in tapered candleabras. On either side of the doors to the auditorium were tables with cloths to match the napkins, plates and

cup. The table on the right held an arrangement of roses and a stack of programs; on the left were the coffee urn, cream pitcher and sugar bowl. Refreshments consisted of finger sandwiches; red and blue mints; nuts; individual 2 inch white cake squares decorated with a small red rose; red punch and coffee. The table looked very beautiful and the refreshments were delicious.

Those responsible for decorations, posters and refreshments were Marjorie Silver Gibbs, Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Huskins, Gladys Chrisawn Thomas, Juanita Johnson Wilson, Dorothy Howell Grindstaff, Violet McKinney Bradford and Farrie Styles Fox.

The program was completely unrehearsed and did not go as planned, due to the fact that some were absent that were to take part. Thurman Huskins did a good job as MC of the program (in the absence of Jack Wheeler) with some jokes and amusing remarks directed at members of the class. Farrie Fox read the list of Class Superlatives. Kathleen Blalock Young, class poet, read a poem she had composed. Rev. Thomas Young, valedictorian and class president, gave a very appropriate talk and led the class in a pledge of allegiance to our flag. The class sang the first stanza of both America and The Star Spangled Banner. David Silver led the singing. Marjorie Gibbs accompanied. Mr. Claud Leslie made pictures of the group. Everyone present enjoyed seeing each other again and all the good natured kidding. It is hoped that more of the class will get together next year for a picnic.
