SCS Has Bird Slides

The Soil Conservation Service has produced a new slide set telling interested people how to attract birds to their home, designed for showing to civic and garden clubs, school groups and others.

State Conservationist Jesse L. Hicks of Raleigh, who heads the federal conservation agency in North Carolina, said: "We believe this will be an appealing presentation. Most North Carolinians like to have songbirds around the place."

Although the set has 75 slides drawn from a wide geographic area, many of the slides were made in North Carolina. Tally O. Bowman of Hickory contributed slides showing mocking birds, baby flickers, the Carolina wren and bluebirds to the set.

The slide presentation is an accompaniment to the recent color booklet also entitled "Invite Birds to Your Home," which has already been distributed to thousands of North Carolinians. The SCS county office has free copies of this publication for interested people.

Both the booklet and slide presentation tell of suitable plantings of shrubs and trees which provide food and shelter for various birds. By planting such shrubs, people literally "invite birds" to their homes.

If your organization or club is interested in presenting this slide program at one of your functions contact Ray Dorsett, District Conservationist. Call 682-2466 or come by Room 12 of the County Courthouse.

Church Revival Planned

Rev. Van Grindstaff, pastor of the Riverside Baptist Church, has announced that a Revival will be held at their church beginning on Sunday evening, the 17th of April and continuing through the week or as the Lord leads. The services will begin at 7:30 p.m. each evening with a prayer group to meet at 7:15.

Evangelist Terry M. Allen, founder and president of the Allen Evangelistic Enterprises, Spruce Pine, N.C. will be doing the preaching each evening.

According to the pastor, Rev. Grindstaff, the public is invited to attend all the services. There will be special music each evening. The church is located just two miles west of Burnsville on highway U.S.19.

SCS Assistance Can Be Valuable

Warm weather will soon bring an increase in building activity and in farming operations--and one key type of assistance provided by the Soil Conservation Service can prove valuable in both instances.

"It may seem surprising that the same type of service can help such diverse groups as builders and farmers; most people think that they require vastly different assistance. But control of erosion on critically eroding areas is a common problem which they share."

He said that the more critical problem will probably occur on building sites, where new homes, stores, and other commercial property will rise, probably replacing woodland or farmland. More than 200 acres of land each day are converted to "urbanization" in North Carolina, according to conservative estimates.

"Of course, the SCS is ready to help anyone with an erosion problem. Some critical areas are still found on farms, even though farmers as a whole are doing a tremendous job of conservation in North Carolina."

Establishment of permanent vegetation, diversions, and other remedies can be applied to farmland to solve such problems. And many of the same techniques do a good job on sites being converted to shopping centers or residential areas."

Help is available through local soil and water conservation districts, which serve every county in North Carolina. Professional SCS workers aid with actual practices and corrective measures.

Assistance from the SCS is available without charge. Like all programs and services of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, erosion control services are available to everyone without regard to race, creed, color, sex, or national origin.

Autograph Party And Reception

The Council on Appalachian Women and the Southern Appalachian Center will jointly sponsor an autograph party and reception for Lena Penland Purkey on April 16, 1977, from 3 until 5 p.m. in the Appalachian Room of Memorial Library on the Mars Hill College campus.

Mrs. Purkey wrote Home in Madison County, a warm and sensitive book about her childhood and growing up in the Hot Springs area of Madison County.

The public is invited to attend.
