'What's Your 10-20, Raccoon Good Buddy?'

How does a raccoon spend his evenings? Where does he go during the day? Do raccoons range over fairly wide areas, or do they tend to stay in one place? How well does a raccoon stocked from another part of the State adapt to his new home?

The answers to these and many other questions are being sought in an extensive five-year study of raccoons in western North Carolina by game biologists for the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission. In order to get the most accurate information possible, raccoons are being equipped with radio transmitters. Biologists are monitoring the radios so that they can chart the movements of the raccoons. In a sense, it's like wire tapping raccoons or giving them CB Radios in order to keep track of their 10-20's [where they are, in CB lingo].

Four native raccoons which were live-trapped in the Sherwood area of Haywood County have been fitted with transmitters, along with four non-native raccoons which were trapped in central North Carolina. Each transmitter has a different frequency, so that biologists can accurately plot each animal without getting them mixed up. In some cases, radio-equipped aircraft have been used to locate some of the raccoons. Some two dozen non-native raccoons have also been tagged and released, and the overall study will involve a number of projects in addition to monitoring movement of raccoons.

WKYK Expansion Begins

On June 24, the Federal Communications Commission announced approval of application by Mark Media, Inc. to make major expansions and changes at WKYK, Burnsville, N.C. The FCC granted Mark Media a construction permit to change frequency to 940 K.C. and add nighttime broadcast service.

According to J. Ardell Sink, president of Mark Media, construction and installation of new equipment will begin within the next few weeks and is expected to be completed by mid October. The station has been granted authority to operate 24 hours per day with no limit on operating hours. The increased broadcast hours will permit WKYK to expand its musical format and to increase its coverage of Yancey and Mitchell County sporting events, many of which will be broadcast live. Rick Bacon, in addition to his duties as Sales Manager, will serve as sports director of WKYK.

Two additional broadcast towers will be installed at the present tower site on East Main Street in Burnsville. According to engineering studies approved by the FCC, the WKYK coverage area will more than triple and approximately 100,000 people will be served in the primary signal area of the station. In addition to new equipment for nighttime and pre-sunrise operations, WKYK will be equipped soon for ATS, recently approved by the FCC for automated Transmitter Service.

The frequency change and improvements at WKYK are facilitated by proposed changes at Radio Station WKKR, in Pickens, S.C., also owned by Mark Media, Inc. WKKR Pickens, operates on 1540 K.C. the same as WKYK at present. With WKYK, Burnsville moving soon to 940 on the dial WKKR will be able to increase their power on 1540 K.C. from 1000 Watts to 10,000 Watts.

In other changes at WKYK, Sink announced that the station has added United Press International computerized teletype service to supplement the mutual network news service and the local news department.

In recent personnel additions, Garry Jarrett has been named operations manager at WKYK and Robert Wyatt is now news and community affairs director.
