Helms Criticises Budget Proposal

Senator Jesse Helms said recently that Joseph Califano, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, now seems to be attempting to take over the duties of the Secretary of Agriculture.

The Administration's new budget proposal would mean that the Oxford, North Carolina, Tobacco Production Research Station would be closed. Three other stations would also be shut down, and programs would be sharply curtailed at three others around the nation.

In voicing his support for continued research on tobacco Senator Helms stated, "The elimination of $3 million in tobacco production research is another blow to farmers who are in the midst of the worst farm crisis since the Great Depression." Helms is a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Helms said, "farm income which, in terms of current dollars, was $33 billion four years ago (1974), fell to about $20 billion in 1977. To cut research programs out from under the American farmer in this manner again shows an insensitivity to what is happening to farmers all over the nation."

Senator Helms added, "I will fight these proposed cuts. I guarantee that Senator Talmadge and I will do everything necessary to block Secretary Califano in this matter." Talmadge is chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee. Helms said he and Talmadge would take the matter to the Senate Appropriations Committee, if necessary.

"Research on tobacco is essential to our farmers. The Oxford Station has been very active in developing new disease and insect resistant varieties which would lower a farmer's production costs," Helms said.

"Additionally, the scientists there have been identifying undesirable chemical constituents in tobacco, and have been able to develop varieties that will be safer for the consumer."

"It just seems incredible that Mr. Califano's influence can reach so deep into the Agriculture Department," Helms continued. "Our farmers and those who use tobacco products will suffer if Mr. Califano is allowed to prevail."
