"To Whom It May Concern"

CULBERSON - The person who hit a German Shepherd dog on Highway 64 the morning of Friday, June 21, could have stopped and told the owners that they had hit a dog and her life may have been saved. But they didn't stop. Instead they went on their way and let her suffer and die. Now a little boy is very sad because his pal and companion is gone. He had raised the dog from six weeks old and she went everywhere he did and wouldn't let any harm come to him.

Now he doesn't have anyone to play with and is very sad over the loss of his pal. So if anyone ever hits a dog along the road, please stop and find out if you can help the dog. Maybe it will belong to some little boy or girl who loves the dog very much (some people don't). We try to keep our dogs in their yards but just sometimes they will be playing and happen to go on the road.

Please, Mr. Motorist, please stop the next time your car hits a dog and try to help. Sometimes you can save their lives.

"A Very Sad Little Four Year Old."

INSURANCE COMPANIES PROVIDE MANY SERVICES
"I've seen advertisements about the services insurance companies provide if I file a claim. But I've never filed a claim and I'd like to know what kind of service do I get for my money?" a reader asks.

Theoretically, an insurance company doesn't have to offer any service except to pay for losses covered in your policy. In practice, however, insurance companies provide constant services, and you are probably not aware of many of them. These services have done as much to improve your personal safety as they have to hold your insurance costs down.

For instance, organizations founded or supported by insurance companies set standards for fire resistant construction, make recommendations for improving the community fire-fighting techniques, test everything from household extension cords to massive fire doors for safety, and employ investigators to check suspected cases of arson.

It was the insurance business that pioneered driver education courses, and fought for safety glass and seatbelts in automobiles. It supports an institute that makes grants to study why automobile accidents occur and how they can be prevented.

Your local agent, too, is busy. He doesn't just remind you when your policy is expiring. The insurance business is changing rapidly and he will keep you informed about changes in policies that can offer you better protection. He will try to be sure that you are not overinsured in one area and "wide open" in another. Finally, of course, he stands ready to discuss all your insurance needs at any time.

This column will be glad to answer questions you may have about property and casualty insurance. Send them to Hyde Insurance Agency in Murphy, North Carolina.
