TV Station Seeking Location For Translator Relay Here

ASHEVILLE - Officials of WLOS-TV, channel 13, have notified Murphy Chamber of Commerce President W. D. Townson that the station is sending engineers to Murphy to seek a location to erect a translator, which would re-broadcast the station's signal for residents in this area.

George Sprague, chief engineer of the station, said that WLOS-TV now has installations of this type in Bryson City, Waynesville, and Tryon, and has applications pending with the Federal Communications Commission for Sylva and Franklin.

A "translator" receives the signal of the television station and re-broadcasts it on a different channel, with sufficient power to cover a specific community.

Sprague said the station must find a location where the Channel 13 picture can be received within a few miles of Murphy, and where the installation will have "line of sight" over the community.

There must be an access road to the location, and power must be available to make workable. The station will file an application with the FCC for a license to construct. All cost for the installation will be paid by WLOS-TV.
