Cuz's Corner By Bagley

It's All Greek To Us

Along with me a lot of you may often wonder who first used many of the expressions common in our every day conversations. I have run a few of them down and thought I would pass them along to you in this week's column.

I will list those by Shakespeare first, since he is responsible for so many. You will learn, just as I did, that ole William was pretty much of a pop-off.

Melted into thin air. It beggared all description. Brevity is the soul of wit. Cheek by jole. As cold as any stone. That it should come to this. The crack of doom. The most unkindest cut of all. (You see, ole Bill wasn't above using a double superlative) I can cut a caper. We've seen better days. He will give the devil his due. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears. He hath eaten me out of house and home. (He must've had kinfolks come to visit him). An eyesore to our solemn festival. There's something in the wind. A thousand times, good-night! Play fast and loose with faith. At my fingertips. Pound of flesh. Forever and a day. It was Greek to me. My salad days. The green sickness (envy). My heart upon my sleeve. 'Tis neither here nor there. A horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse. Lay on Macduff. The livelong day. Lily-livered. This is the short and long of it. The course of true love never did run smooth. One that loved not wisely but too well. The milk of human kindness. What's in a name? That which we call a rose by any other name would smell as sweet. An itching palm. A plague o' both your houses. The play's the thing. The lady doth protest too much. Something is rotten in the state of Denmark. Like a drunken sailor. More sinned against than sinning. I have not slept one wink. So, so. At one fell swoop. The sweet. Like a pair of loving turtle doves. Westward-ho. (I bet you thought that came from Wagon Train).

Ben Franklin: There is nothing certain but death and taxes. Three moves are as bad as a fire. Little strokes fell great oaks. He that goes a borrowing goes a sorrowing. We must all hang together, or assuredly we shall all hang separately.

Finally a few funny ones --- I think:

Frank McKinny: It's no disgrace to be poor, but it might as well be. He was a power politically for years, but he never got prominent enough 't have his speeches garbled. When a fellow says it hain't the money but the principle o' the thing, it's the money. No-buddy ever fergets where he buried a hatchet.

Will Rogers: Everything is funny as long as it is happening to somebody else. Politics has got so expensive that it takes lots of money to even get beat with. More men have been elected between Sundown and Sunup, than ever were elected between Sunup and Sundown.

Mark Twain: It could probably be shown by facts and figures that there is no distinctly native American criminal class except Congress. Why is it that we rejoice at a birth and grieve at a funeral? It is because we are not the person involved. When in doubt tell the truth. Man is the only animal that blushes--- or needs to. Always do right. This will gratify some people, and astonish the rest. (President Truman kept this saying on his desk in the White House). Winston Churchill: Nothing in life is so exhilarating as to be shot at without result.

Then there are many of these old sayings that have been handed down whose authorship is unknown, such as the following:
A fool and his money are soon parted. If wishes were horses beggars would ride. Forgive and forget. When poverty comes in at the door love flies out the window. Stitch in time saves nine.

Alexander Pope said these: To err is human, to forgive is divine. Fools rush in where angels fear to tread. Blessed is he who expects nothing, for he shall never be disappointed. (Of this one Pope said that it should be the eighth beatitude.)

W. C. Fields: It ain't a fit night out for man nor beast. Petronius: Not worth his salt. Beware of the dog.

Plato: Necessity is the mother of invention.

Pubilius Syrus: A rolling stone gathers no moss.

Addaeus: Strike while the iron is hot.

From The Proverbs, by John Heywood: A burnt child
