We overheard two young ladies telling P. J. Henn, owner of the Henn Theatre, that they just didn't like the movie, "Cleopatra". You can't get P. J. down, though, for he told them, "You are just jealous of Elizabeth Taylor and had already made up your mind not to like it when you came,"

A tip of our hat to the powers that be for getting street cleaning operations underway here in Murphy: Town employess have begun shoveling away gravel that was placed on the streets due to recent snowfall, Good Ole Charlie Johnson, town of Mur-phy Clerk, allows that the ses will soon be turned on and our streets will be sparkling once again.

Keeping in mind some of last year's defeats, we'll extend a small prediction: (1) Tomotla won't rule the roost this year; (2) Preacher Bill Thompson and his hard playing Baptist Nine, are going to run into a lot of trouble; (3) the Jayones. . . well, we'd better talk about that later.

Oh, woe is mel Sadness surrounds us, Sue Kilpatrick, the Scout's ace typesetter for the past three years, is departing from our midst. Sue and her husband, Franklin, have staked out a claim over in Chattanooga, and will be leaving Friday. It will probably be hard to get these machines to run for anybody

Mrs. David Hyatt Speaks To Jaycees

MURPHY- Mrs. David Hy

att, child welfare worker for Cherokee County, spoke to the Murphy Junior Chamber of Commerce at their regular dinner meeting, Tuesday March 2. Mrs. Hyatt's purpose for speaking to the Jaycees and other local clubs was to enlist their assistance in establishing an emergency clothing fund for children place in care of the Cherokee County Welfare Department.

The court places these children in the custody of the Welfare Department, who may in turn place them in foster homes. At the present time there are two foster homes in Cherokee County. Mrs. Hyatt stated that at least five such homes are needed. Jointly participating, Cherokee County allots $25.00 and the federal government $25.00 monthly per child to the foster home for their support However, no funds are reuntil the child has been in their care for thirty days "When these children are placed in the custody of the Welfare Department by the courts, often they have only the clothes they are wearing, and some infants only a few diapers," Mrs. Hyatt said. Mrs. Hyatt pointed out that an emergency fund of approximately $25.00 would allow the Welfare Department to assist foster parents in cloth-ing these children until their first check is received. 'Local clubs, making an initial small donation, could set up such an emergency fund. As the funds are used each club would be called upon to make a small re-placement donation," Mrs. Hyatt concluded. A spokesman for the Jaycees stated that the request would be taken up at the next board of directors meeting and the Welfare Department would be notified of the Club's participation in this fund.
