EXPLANATION OF ANSWERS

ACROSS:

1. It's usually obvious when a person is WIRY (Wily). - The essence of williness is concealment. It might take a long time to discover that a person is Wily. WIRY, a physical condition, is obvious at a glance.
3. Being SLY often leads one into foolish lying (Fly). - Fly means to be wide-awake, knowing. A person who is Fly need not have recourse to lies. Not so, however, a person who is SLY, underhanded.
5. A doting mother is apt to resent being told she PAMPERS her child. (Hampers). - Hampers is much the more serious term, and she would be more than merely apt to resent it. PAMPERS means to overindulge, to coddle, and a doting mother would not necessarily resent the charge.
9. Wicked indeed are swindlers who TAIN'T honest people (Taunt). - Wicked indeed calls for the more heinous action, TAIN'T, to contaminate morally. That they merely Taunt honest people does not make them wicked in so great a degree.
10. It's sometimes possible to READ a person by looking at him (Rend). - Not even sometimes is it possible to Rend, tear apart physically, by a look. To READ, in the sense of reading mind or character, is sometimes possible.
13. Wives whose husbands continually DEFER to them are often envied by other women (Refer). - Far too much depends on how their husbands Refer to them. DEFER, to yield, makes a more positive statement of the proposition.
14. Usually, the better a man's POST, the greater the respect of his acquaintances (Past). - His acquaintances, might know little about his Past. POST, position, or job, is more realistic.
15. A conscientious father usually likes to have his SAY in bringing up his child (Way). - It would scarcely be a conscientious father who usually likes to have his Way in bringing up his child. Such a man would state his opinions, have his SAY, but he would go along with what is best for the child.

DOWN:

1. A bad memory is apt to be a serious handicap to a WRITER (Waiter). - Not to a Waiter, who can write down the orders given to him. A bad memory is much more of a handicap to a WRITER.
2. After-dinner speakers are responsible for many a good YARN (Yawn). - The speaker is responsible, accountable, for the YARN, story, he tells. The Yawn of a dinner guest is almost completely out of his control.
4. A stern judge seldom shows LENITY when dealing with a habitual offender (Levity). - Though stern, he might find cause to show LENITY, leniency, even though seldom. A stern judge by nature would not show Levity, a light casual approach to the case of such an offender.
6. A dinner party being MUTE is apt to be embarrassing at a dinner party (Mutt). - The person who is MUTE, silent, contributes nothing to the conversation. His presence is but apt to be embarrassing, depending on the liveliness of the rest of the company. A Mutt, a stupid person, would almost certainly be a liability at such a party.
7. People who continually SEEM to be happy are seldom unpopular (Seek). - People who constantly search for happiness, who Seek it, are often unpopular because of the intensity of their efforts. If they bear the appearance, if they SEEM happy, they're nice to be with and are therefore usually popular.
8. As a rule, an animal that is TAME has little chance of survival in a jungle. (Lame). - As a rule is too extreme with Lame. The lameness might be only temporary. TAME is best.
11. To women of a century ago probably most modern girls would seem DEFT (Daft). - DEFT, skillful, is the best word to complete the statement. That they would seem Daft, crazy, to women of another era is not a logical statement.
12. It's seldom good for a business to have as president a man who is FOGY (Foxy). - Even though seldom, an old-fashioned person, might be just the right type to head a business enterprise. More often than seldom, a Foxy wide-awake, wily man is good for a business.
