Racing With Red

By: Red Schuyler

According to advance reports from Rockingham, a crowd in excess of 50,000 is expected to watch Ford and Chrysler battle in the inaugural Feach Blossom 500-mile stock car race at North Carolina Speedway.

Yarborough, who hails from Timmonsville South Carolina is only 25 years old and racing for quite a few years has only been to the victors circle one time. That occurring June 27 1965 in a 100 mile race staged at Valdosta, Ga. For his efforts he picked up $1000.

In this writer's eyes, he is the man most like the late "Fireball" Roberts than anyone I can think of.

Even though he has won only one race, Yarborough has come so close to winning races on a super track that his luck is bound to change sooner or later and I predict that it will be soon. I would say possible that with a little luck, barring an accident or a malfunction of his car that he will win the inaugural Feach Blossom 500 this Sunday at Rockingham.

After being a bridesmaid in his last two super speedway races, Cale believes he's ready for victory. There are many reasons why stock car races are lost, and Yarborough has one for each of his second place finishes.

To quote Cale, "I finished 11 seconds back of Turner in the American 500, and that race would have been mine if the gas cap hadn't been left off my car once which resulted in an extra pit stop. The Daytona 500... well, I couldn't have asked for anything to go any better. I just lack the horsepower in that one. I don't believe the horsepower advantage that Chrysler enjoyed at Daytona will be an overwhelming factor at Rockingham and that's why I think my victory chances are excellent. The Fords and Chrysler products will be pretty well equal on March 13, because we will gain speed in handling what we lack in horsepower.

shed first and third in the inaugural American 500.

The early birds this week were the Fords of Lorenzen and Hutcherson, beating all other factory cars through the inspection sheds Monday at NASCAR's newest speedway.

Lorenzen, stock car racing's most successful chaffier with more than $250,000 won since he joined Holman-Moody in 1961, grinned when informed of the history behind the early bird and then cracked, "sounds like I have a very good chance of filling out my flush."

He was referring to the fact that at N. C. Motor Speedway would make him the only driver in history to score victories at all of the South's super speedways. Lorenzen was the first to score a grand slam with wins at Charlotte, Darlington, Atlanta, and Daytona. But Junior Johnson made it a two-man club.

Johnson is retired now, and Lorenzen would like nothing better than to confirm what many racing fans already think...that he is in a class at the very top all by himself.

Lorenzen, incidentally, never led a lap of the first race at N. C. Speedway.

The Rambler, previously entered by Larry Hess, has been withdrawn, says its not ready to race. This could have made history because it would have been the first race in which all four American manufacturers would have been represented: General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and American Motors.

A Rambler has never competed in an American Stock car race. It's predecessor, Nash, did record one victory on NASCAR's Grand National circuit in 1951. Buck Baker, the grand old man of racing and three time winner of the Darlington Southern 500 was the driver.

The next race on the circuit will be staged at the best and most beautiful track at Bristol Tenn. Sunday March 20. This will be a 250 mile race around a 1/2 mile track. Then they move on to Atlanta International Raceway for the 7th annual 500 mile race. This could have been a busy month for the Grand National drivers. Races that were wiped out due to weather conditions were the 100 mile race scheduled for Spartanburg last Saturday afternoon and the 150 mile race scheduled for the Asheville - Weaverville track on Sunday. With two weeks elapsed since the Daytona 500, the drivers will be well rested and the cars in A-1 Shape.

Point standings and money winners so far are: David Pearson, $14,610 and 7,882 points, Ned Jarrett $5,495 and 6,952, Richard Petty, $21,350 and 6,734 points and Cale Yarborough $9,490 and 6,176 points.

Bats And Butterflies

Life can be a real drag, but it has its moments. A couple of them came to me this week to convince me that it's more fun to be alive and suffering than stone cold dead in the cemetery.

The other night I took three busloads of students to see a play, "Murder in the Cathedral," in a neighboring town. I won't even mention what a nightmare such an excursion is for the man in charge of a hundred-odd lively teenagers.

We arrived in best clothes and best manners, ready for an evening of culture. The house lights dimmed; the stark set was revealed; the chorus came on with its brooding note of doom and death. You could have heard a feather drop as a thousand youngsters sat enthralled.

Suddenly a ripple of sound went through the theatre. The ripple rapidly became a wave. The chorus, in the best show tradition, bravely pressed on, its chant almost lost in the swelling titter. The ghost of the old opera house had taken over.

He had assumed the form of a large bat. The noise and lights had frightened him out of his eyrie among the rafters. And he put on a display of aerobatics that stole the show.

He swooped and swirled over audience and actors. He flickered through the shadows, in ever-descending circles that had all the girls clutching their hair. He peeled off and dive-bombed the chorus, making it duck collectively and frantically floorwards.

He disappeared intermittently, but a born scene-stealer was right on cue for his entries. "Thomas Beckett, Archbishop of Canterbury, intoned. "For a little time the hungry hawk will only soar and hover, circling lower..."

And there was Mr. Bat, whistling around the actor's ears. The chorus wailed, "I have heard fluting in the night-time... have seen scaly wings slanting over." And guess who was fluting around gaily on his scaly wings, right past their noses.

All in all, a diverting evening in the theatre. I won't speak for the players, but the kids and the bat loved it.

My second reviving experience was not with a bat, but a butterfly. I think that term best describes my 14-year-old. She flits. She can't quite decide whether she's going to be a writer, a folk singer, a concert pianist or a basketball player.

Last Saturday, I took her to the city to compete in the world's biggest music festival. Competition is rough. Her teacher and her mother had both told her she hadn't a chance. "Because you haven't worked hard enough."

She was pretty jittery. Teeth chattering, great nervous yawns, four trips to the bathroom in 20 minutes. My heart bled for her.

In her first class there were 12 competitors. Guess who was last. It was for students 20 and under. They were all 4000. Even though I've been to a hundred festivals, and am pretty worldly, my spirits sank, for her sake.

The bell clanged. She went on stage. And as I sat, turning purple while holding my breath through a Bach prelude and fugue, she played like a tiger. Second place was ake.

We tottered out of the auditorium in a daze, leapt into a cab, rushed to meet her Mom, and hurried her words back in her face.

The kid repeated twice during the afternoon, and we arrived home after a 12-hour day and a 200-mile trip, staggering with exhaustion but flushed with triumph.

Of bats and butterflies, I guess, is the essence of life.
