LITTLE COUNTIES... In checking farther into the May 28 Democratic primary returns, its interesting to note how well the small counties fared.

In many instances the candidates from the smaller counties won out over the candidates from the larger counties.

Chances are that in the future the person's home county will not be the determining factor in multiple county districts.

HARRY BUCHANAN-Former Highway Commissioner Harry E. Buchanan of Henderson County with a population of 36,163 was nominated State Senator over Oral Yates, incumbent senator of Haywood County with a population of 39,711. Other county in the district was Polk with a population of 11,395.

GEORGE WOOD-In the Second senatorial district composed of ten counties, George Wood from Camden County, second smallest county in the state was nominated as one of the state senators along with Monk Harrington of Bertie County. J. Emmett Winslow of Perquimans county with a population of 9,178 lost to Wood of Camden with a population of 5,598. The other candidate in the race was Keppie Farrell of Pasquotank County with a population of 25,630. Farrell was ill during most of the campaign and unable to move about and ran fourth.

JIMMY GREENE-Rep. James C. Greene of Bladen County won easily in the race for State Senator in the 15th district composed of Bladen, Brunswick and Columbus counties over Alex Weir of Columbus. Bladen has a population of 28,881 as compared with 48,973 for Columbus.

VERY FEW-Very few if any small counties were freed out of representation by larger counties in multiple county districts where there were enough of seats to go around.

In the 45th House District composed of Buncombe and McDowell counties with four seats, three were nominated from Buncombe and one from McDowell.

In the 47th House District composed of Haywood with 39,711; Madison with 17,217; and Yancey with 14,008, Ernest Messer was nominated from Haywood and Liston Ramsey from Madison.

DISTRICT COURT - In the contest for the four new District Judges in the new district composed of Cumberland with 148,418 and Hoke with 16,356 Joe Dupress of Hoke was nominated as one of the four judges, with three, Coy Brewster, Derb Carter and D.B. Herring, Jr., coming from Cumberland.

House and Senate of the 1967 General Assembly with Bert Bennett of Winston-Salem who managed Sanford's successful race for governor heading the list.

John Henley of Cumberland close associate of Sanford was also nominated to the Senate. He served in the House under Sanford and later as his Director of Purchase and Contract.

Sneed High of Cumberland who served in the House while Sanford was governor, and later as his Commissioner of Revenue will be back in the 1967 House.

Skipper Bowles of Greensboro who served as Sanford's C&D Director for a couple of years has been nominated to the House, along with Bill Staton of Lee County who was Democratic National Committeeman under Sanford.

W.E. (Dub) Graham of Mecklenburg who had Sanford's nod when he won the State YDC presidency will be in the House.

ARTHUR WILLIAMSON - While Rep. Arthur W. Williamson of Columbus County has had some hot political races in the past most people thought he would win re-nomination for a fourth term in the House, but the May 28th results showed him that Rep. Odell Williamson of Brunswick and Clyde Collier of Columbus were nominated. The vote stood: Odell Williamson 6,641; Clyde Collier, 6,682 and Arthur Williamson, 6,389.

Arthur Williamson has long been a potent power in Columbus politics.

BOB LEATHERWOOD-Bob Leatherwood, veteran House member from Swain County diverted his attention to a district judgeship and won handily in the 30th judicial district with Felix E. Alley winning the other judgeship in the district. Losing candidates in the races were Guy L. Houk and James Hardin Howell, Jr.

VEGETABLES
SIDEDRESSING VEGETABLES IN THE GARDEN is highly desirable for high quality and yields. Short season crops such as snapbeans, cucumbers and squash generally require only one sidedress application while long season crops such as tomatoes, pole beans, and okra respond positively to multiple applications.

Sidedressing materials may be an all-nitrate nitrogen (sodium nitrate) or a combination of nitrate and ammonia nitrogen (Ammonium nitrate Calnitro). Some vegetables, especially tomatoes, require high rates of potash. In such cases a mixture of nitrogen and potash can be used. Examples of these type materials are 14-0-14, 15-0-15 or 8-0-24. Most garden and farm supply stores will carry these materials.

The rate of application will depend on the soil type. On more fertile soils about 1-2 cups of the above materials will be satisfactory. Less fertile soils will require about twice this amount. Care must be taken to ascertain that fertilizer materials do not come in contact with plant foliage, especially when wet.

IRRIGATION IS equally important as fertilization during dry periods. For small areas a "soaker hose" works well. For larger areas use a revolving flapper type irrigation nozzle attached to a 1/2 inch pipe. Run a garden hose from the nearest spigot and attach to pipe. A simple base can be constructed to hold the sprinkler upright. Such a system can be moved quickly and easily to irrigate the entire garden. Usually one inch of water per week is satisfactory.
