

Young Harris Presents "Skin Of Our Teeth"

The Department of Speech and Theatre of Young Harris College will present Thornton Wilder's bewitching and befuddling comedy, "The Skin of Our Teeth," November 9, 10, and 11, at 8:00 p.m. in the Clegg Fine Arts Auditorium, Young Harris College.

David Braddy (Atlanta), Steve Wilson (Commerce), Cassie Dempsey (Atlanta), Phil Thomas (Decatur), Jim Colwell (Blairsville), Greg Smith (Atlanta), Gary Dye (Young Harris), Arden Lowry (Woodruff, S. C.), Bruce Edwards (Murphy), Kattee Robuck (Tampa, Fla.), Olivia Collis (McCaysville), Irene Walker (Rome), Peter Grey (Atlanta), Poppy Revell (Monticello, Fla.), Margaret Green (Albany), Carma Hardy (Atlanta), Nat Hamlin (Lizzilla), Bill Harper (Atlanta), Randy Randolph (Oak Ridge, Tenn.), and Sara Schindell (Athens).

The Department of Speech and Theatre is a newly organized section of the Fine Arts Department. With the addition of this area to its fine arts program Young Harris College now offers an Associate of Fine Arts degree with majors in these areas: art, music, and speech and theatre.

Robert R. Pevitts is chairman of the newly organized department and his wife, Beverly Byers Pevitts, is an instructor in the speech and theatre areas. Mrs. Pevitts is directing the November production of "The Skin of Our Teeth" and Mr. Pevitts is serving as designer and technical director.

Thornton Wilder received his third Pulitzer Prize for "The Skin of Our Teeth", a play about the family of man which presents you--the average American--at grips with a destiny, sometimes sour, sometimes sweet. The play is a tribute to man's indestructibility and as such is as applicable to man today as it was 26 years ago.

The student cast is led by Phil Hutcheson (Atlanta) playing Mr. Antrobus, Phyllis Ghoto (Jacksonville, Fla.) as Mrs. Antrobus and Melanie Cobb (Waynesboro) as Sabina. Jeff Strickland (Atlanta) and Dottie McKay (Covington) are cast as the Antrobuses son and daughter. Other cast members are:
