CHURCH NOTES

Baptist churches throughout the nation will be observing Race Relations Day on Sunday.

The primary purpose of this observance is to encourage church members to put forth an effort in bettering human relations in the communities where they live.

In North Carolina, there are more than 3400 churches in the predominantly white Baptist State Convention. These two conventions report a membership of over 1,300,000.

The conventions work together in various ways. In 1967 they will climax a united effort in evangelism by co-sponsoring a statewide conference on evangelism in Greensboro.

The Department of Interracial Cooperation of these two conventions offers free materials and personnel to help churches with promotion of Race Relations Sunday and other projects. That address is Box 9523, Raleigh, N. C.
