What To Know About Your

The Independent Grocers' Alliance, started in 1926 with a nucleus of 69 independent grocers who were fighting for survival, has grown steadily since its inception.

Today, IGA is the largest voluntary food "chain" in the nation. Some 3,700 independent businessmen who own and operate their own IGA stores enjoy the advantages of big business through their alliance. They have mass buying power, training programs, store growth and development plans, and advertising and promotional aids; and they are provided with expert, professional guidance.

The vast IGA distribution system stretches throughout 46 states, including Alaska and Hawaii. Annual volume has steadily climbed to about $3 billion annually, and it continues to grow because of the incomparable relationship between the retailer and wholesaler and IGA International Staff Office. Through this three-way cooperation, IGA customers shop with complete confidence, knowing that they are buying the best products and the lowest possible prices.

"Our successes in the future will be determined by our retail skills."
