

Rescue Squad Raising Funds For Building

The Clay County Rescue Squad is sponsoring the construction of a building to house the fire trucks and Rescue Squad vehicles.

As planned, the building will be of block construction, 30 x 48 feet, and will be located on city-owned property just behind the Hayesville city hall. It will house both the town and county fire trucks, the Rescue Squad ambulance and one other

Rescue Squad vehicle. The portion of the present city hall being used for storing the city's fire truck will be converted into an assembly hall, with kitchen facilities and a rest room.

Both Felix Lance, County Fire Chief, and Bob Cunningham, City Fire Chief, and also a member of the Town Council, are quite concerned about getting some place to store both fire trucks, where they will not be exposed to freezing weather. The only way they are able to take care of the county truck, at present, is to drain the water out of it.

Mayor Carroll says the town budget has no funds available now, but will include funds in next year's budget to assist with this project. In the meantime, the Rescue Squad is raising funds in various ways, including donations, to finance the building.

Yellow Jacket Club Formed

Some 40 patrons of Hayesville High School met on Oct. 30 and organized the Yellow Jacket Club. The purpose is to help finance and build morale necessary for building a high school football team.

Officers elected were: Earl Deitz, president; Bill Tipton, vice pres.; Earl Jackson, Secretary-Treasurer. A board of trustees was elected: Carl D. Moses, Claud McDowell and Randle West.

Annual membership fees were set at $5 and according to Deitz, there have been 40 pledged for that amount, with several of that number agreeing to make sizeable contributions.

The club plans to entertain the present team at a supper at Yellow Jacket Restaurant on next Saturday night.

CHARLES W. SMITH, a native of the Tusquitee section of Clay County, was recently elected president of the 9th District Pharmaceutical Association at a druggists' meeting in Gainesville, Ga. He operates his own Rexall Pharmacy in Toccoa, Ga. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Smith of Hayesville and is married to the former Mary Jo Wood of Hayesville.

Nickels For Know-How Vote Slated

Cherokee County farm families are being urged to mark Nov. 25 as a special date on their calendar. This is the Nickels for Know-How referendum day throughout North Carolina.

"By now, our farmers should be thoroughly familiar with the issue that is to be voted on," observed Jack Earley, county extension chairman. "Our hope is that every eligible voter will take the few minutes required to cast a ballot. We would like to have the largest turnout in the 18-year history of the program."

Nickels for Know-How is the North Carolina farmer's own program of self help. Through it, farmers donate five cents for each ton of feed and fertilizer purchased to support agricultural research and education at North Carolina State University.

The program has been voted on each three years since 1951. A favorable vote by two-thirds of those voting is required to renew the program, this time for six years. In previous referendums, the vote has been heavily in favor of renewal.

Earley explained that participation in Nickels for

Know-How is voluntary. Although the five-cent assessment is included in the price of the feed or fertilizer at the time of purchase, any farmer can have this assessment returned to him upon request.

The county chairman also explained that the Nickels fund is administered by the North Carolina Agricultural Foundation which is composed of farmers and farm leaders from each of the 100 counties.

At a meeting of the Agricultural Foundation recently in Raleigh, Truman McNabb of Rt. 4, Murphy, was elected to a four-year term on the board of directors.

Earley said the Nickels fund has been responsible for the research required in the trelis tomato program in Western North Carolina. Anyone with questions about the Nickels program or about the referendum on Nov. 25 should contact the county extension office for further information.
