Four-Square Meeting Held

A community meeting was held at the Moss Memorial Library in Hayesville on Dec. 29 by Four-Square Community Action, Inc.

Mrs. Marietta Suhart, Director of Four-Square, led the discussion on the cycles of economic deprivation in the area. She said social and economic legislation for the past 20 years has discriminated against rural people. For example, she said before 1952, farmers could not benefit from Social Security.

The rural people at the meeting expressed the need of adequate communication services and the lack of job training and job employment opportunities in the area.

It was felt by the group that such a meeting could be of special value to the low income families since it would provide an opportunity for the low income people to express their opinions along with other people in the community who share their problems.

Dr. Killian Announces For State Senate Seat

CULLOWHEE—Dr. Carl D. Killian, retired dean of the Western Carolina University School of Education and Psychology, announced here Wednesday that he will be a candidate for the State Senate from the 33rd Senatorial District subject to the Democratic primary.

The 33rd Senatorial District is composed of the counties of Clay, Cherokee, Graham, Jackson, Macon, Swain and Transylvania.

For the 68 year-old native of Clay County, now engaged in a crusade for better health and medical services in Southwestern North Carolina, this is his first plunge into elective politics for public office.

Killian is the first Democrat to announce his candidacy for the Senate seat now held by

Dr. Carl Killian

Herman H. West, a Republican of Murphy.

Until his retirement two years ago, Dr. Killian had been known as "Mr. Education" at Western Carolina for 33 years during which he established the first guidance clinic in the state here and started the first course in North Carolina in audio-visual education.

And at his retirement from the university, he became executive director of the State of Franklin Health Council, Inc., an agency fostered by him to upgrade health and medical services in the southwestern counties.

Dr. Killian earned his bachelor's degree at North Carolina State and his doctor of philosophy degree at Ohio State from which, in the midst of the Great Depression, he returned to his native Clay County to teach English at Hayesville High School for two years when he moved to Cullowhee to become head of Western Carolina's education department.

In 1959, Dr. Killian was appointed by Gov. Hodges to head a legislative commission to study the public school education of exceptional children.

And, with virtually unanimous agreement, the 1961 State Legislature approved his proposals by passing the bill providing for the first comprehensive program for gifted children in the United States.

Also, in 1959, Dr. Killian was elected chairman of the Advisory Conference Committee on Extension of the Board of Higher Education. Under his direction, this committee brought on-campus higher education for adults into the main academic stream and gave it the same financial support as regular college programs.

Dr. Killian is married to the former Winnie Alice Murphy of Asheville, and they have one son, Dan, who is now on the University of North Carolina Year at Lyon Program in France.

Dr. Killian is a Baptist, and he is listed in Who's Who in the South and Southwest.

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, chartered in 1789 and opened to students in 1795, is the oldest state university in the United States.

Schools Will Teach How To Grow Tomatoes

Schools to train low income farmers in the skills of growing tumbled tomatoes will start later this month at Brasstown and Robbinsville.

Tomato growers in this area sold an average of about $4,000 off each acre last year, according to the Agricultural Extension Service. The Murphy Packing Shed was also operated last year under new management and ownership and had a highly successful year.

Several agencies are involved in the tomato schools. The Extension Service will be offering technical information and Tri-County Tech will administrate the schools.

Money for the schools has been approved through the Federal Manpower Training and Development Act and the two courses will be sponsored by the Employment Security Commission.

Dr. John Ramsey, director of the John C. Campbell Folk School, will be in charge of instruction. In addition to the tomato-growing part of the course, some of the low-income farmers will also receive schooling in basic education needed to raise and market their crops.

Funds have been approved for 15 students from each of the three counties. The 30 students from Clay and Cherokee will begin classes on Jan. 26 at the folk school at Brasstown. The 15 from Graham will start school on Jan. 19 at the rescue squad building in Robbinsville.

The classes will be five days a week for six weeks, regular school hours. Both men and women can attend. There are no age limits or educational requirements.

Those with incomes of less than $1,200 a year may qualify for weekly training allowances of from $30 to $40 a week. They will also receive a travel allowance for the six weeks.

Employment Security Commission officials will be at the Graham County Courthouse from 9 a.m. until about 4 p.m. on Jan. 13 to enroll students.

For Cherokee and Clay counties, the enrollment will be held at the Folk School at Brasstown from 9-4 on Jan. 14 and 15.
