The set of a lifetime... the only encyclopedia your child will ever need... the one you'll read to him until he can read it himself... by which time he'll have acquired the winning habit of a lifetime... the habit of looking it up.

22 VOLUMES
 Surely you've seen or heard of—the wonderful 1-volume Columbia Encyclopedia. LIFE calls it the best 1-volume encyclopedia. Schools and libraries consider it a must. Well, now a team of better, to be exact.

Extravagantly illustrated
 You'll find the Columbia exciting to use. The entire 22-volume set is sprinkled with significant illustrations that add a whole dimension to the text. Approximately 7000 of them, about 1000 in full color.

Information-packed
 Pick a topic! You're bound to find it in the Columbia. People. Places. Philosophies. Yesterday's history. Tomorrow's science. All authentic; all expressed in a streamlined, no-nonsense manner. Absorbing reading in every volume for both you and your children.

Created right on a college campus
 The entire text of the Columbia Encyclopedia was created right on a college campus. And what better credentials could a reference work have? Your information will be respected in any discussion; your children will go to school well-prepared and well-informed.

Unbelievably low-priced
 This is the kind of reference work you would expect to find prohibitively expensive. And ordinarily you would. But because of special arrangements with the publisher, you're in luck.

The total price of the set is a tiny fraction of what you expect to pay and the purchase plan makes it even more spectacular.

Volume One Only 49¢

CUZ'S CORNER
 Guest Column
 By Bagley

My late friend, Earl Tucker, used to own, edit, and publish the Thomasville (Alabama) Times and he brightened up each issue with his humorous column, Rambling Roses and Flying Bricks. His old columns are now being re-published in that same paper which is now owned by, fortunately for me, another good friend, Pace Bozeman, who was kind enough to give me permission to share The Earl of Thomasville's wonderful wit with my readers every now and then.

I thought the following one was a dandy:
 A guy writing in a national magazine was talking about how many spoken and printed words are wasted. He went ahead to tell how the story of the Creation required less than one page while a governmental bulletin on soy beans might run for several hundred pages.

I'll go along with the writer of the article up to a certain point. What I would prefer, though, is for us to have one page on soy beans and several hundred pages on the Creation, on account of there must have been some powerfully interesting side-lights when the Lord was making the earth, the seas, the moon, the stars, the sun and all the other stuff he was working on at the time. A big-city daily would have assigned at least fifty reporters in an effort to get all the details on a story like that.

Maybe we have grown too long-winded since time began, though, as evidenced by the soy bean article, which as far as I'm concerned, could have shown a picture of a soy bean, what it is good for, and where to get them in case you want some, which I do not.

Some of the articles on "How to do something" generally irritate me because by the time I've finished reading one I'm too give out to do it. However, if the folks who write the little books really made an effort to be concise, there wouldn't be any need to publish it in book form because they could put all the information on a postal card of carrying out this brilliant thought, I am listing a number of un-available booklets similar to the ones we see advertised, along with all the information needed to do the job.

"What to do for arthritis." Take two aspirin tablets and find some sympathetic person who will listen attentively to your complaints.
 "How to paint a room." Hire a painter.
 "How to gain weight." Eat more.
 "How to lose weight." Reverse procedure above.

"What to do until the doctor comes." Read "Gone With the Wind," watch a late, late show, take four aspirin tablets and mail the doctor a check in payment of his last visit.

"How to fix a leaky faucet." Just forget the whole thing. Chances are the clothing you ruin will cost more than a plumber will charge, but you can't get a plumber now, so the best thing to do here is not to order the book and let the faucet keep on leaking. You'll eventually get used to it.
 "How to make friends." Try being one.

"What to do about nut grass in your garden." Pave the area with concrete and use it for a tennis court. The nut grass will eventually come through but you can overcome this by putting down an additional layer of concrete.

"How to make your children mind." This is a rather complicated, but what you do here is to find out what the children want to do and tell them to do it, and be firm.

"What to do if your husband is a heavy drinker." It is hard to be brief on this problem but they are making a tasteless ant poison now that is most effective.
 "Fill out your own income tax forms in twenty minutes." Ha, ha.
 "How to become an effective public speaker." Stay away from this booklet. In case you do become a good speaker the chances are you'll either get in politics or be made chairman of a civic club project that will take so much of your time you'll go broke in your business.
 "How to write a column." I'll just be dog-goned if I know.

Mental Health Group To Meet
 There will be a meeting of the Cherokee-Clay Mental Health Association Jan. 19, 1970, at 7 p.m. The meeting will be held at Tri-County Technical Institute, Peachtree. The purpose of this meeting will be to elect officers, approve the new constitution, and to establish working committees for the years program. Mrs. Cloe Moore of Murphy will officiate.
 The Cherokee-Clay Mental Health Association was formed in December of 1969 when residents of the two counties met and decided there was a need and a role for a Mental Health Association to play in this area.
 All interested persons are urged to attend this important meeting.

Deans List
 James C. Goodwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Goodwin of Murphy, has been placed on the Dean's List of the University of Georgia in Athens, in recognition of his excellent Fall quarter record. He is a junior in the School of Journalism.

We will help plan your sales Seminar or Convention. Meeting rooms are available for groups of 25 to 450. Enjoy the attractions of Gatlinburg and the Great Smokies. Everyone will attend when your meeting is with us.
 Gatlinburg is a favorite of families.
