Dr. Alexander came to talk on "Modern Greece," under the auspices of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew of the Church of the Good Shepherd. His lecture was not upon a topic generally classed as popular, and yet a large and cultivated audience filled the ball to hear him. He read most of the lecture, stopping the reading now and then to throw light upon the subject by a happy incident or historical fact. There wasn't a dull line it it from the beginning. It was "a well of English, undefiled." There was but a passing reference to his service as Minister in a period of epochmaking, showing at once a delicacy and a modesty most unusual in a returned diplomat.

He discussed, all in less than an hour, the history, the indeterm the Hellenes, their climate, agriculture, government, art and civilization with a charm that made every person in the audience regret when the speaker had finished. would please all our readers to have the entire lecture. for the close. Referring to the recent war between Greece and Turkey, Dr. Alexander said: "I wish that I felt free to speak to you of the recent war between, Greece and Turkey, and the causes which led to it. But, if I should make public its inside history, my successor at Athens, as well as the Department of State, might in some way be embarrassed, and I should run the risk of violating the confidence of the King and certain members of his cabinet, and my colleagues, the representatives in Athens of the Six Powers, all of whom talked freely sbout it. But I may say that some day, when all the facts are known, the sympathy of the world will be with the Greeks, even more than now. The war was forced upon then-deliberately. artfully, heartlessly. They have been made to suffer, merely in order that certain of the Six Powers might advance their own interests. So long as affairs in the East are undisturbed, there is little opportunity for doing that; Powers, three had something to gain directly: another neted with chiefly because she could not help herself; the other two thought it the best policy to remain in and act in unison with the European concert, and thus far, they have succeeded, by the wisest domacy, in averting what, to one of them at least, would be a grave calamity. Just at this moment the scene of action seems to have been transferred to the farthest East; but the trouble between Greece and Turkey is no more settled to-day than it was twenty five years ago. The Cretan question, which lies at the bottom of the whole matter, is still open. Apparently, it is not in-tended that it shall be closed, until the object for which it has been open all these years shall have been reached. the European powers have no love for each other. Each of them is watching all the rest with jealous hatred. That, however, does not prevent them from acting together, and from going to any

TEACHING WITHOUT A CERTIFICATE.

An Indictment May Possibly Lie a Common Law, Says the Attorney General.

In some sections of the State the impression prevails that the Attorney Gencountry, made a greater achievement in eral has decided that a teacher is not indictable for teaching without a certi-

> Replying to a letter in regard to this matter Mr. Walser yesterday wrote to

"In reply to your letter of this date, I will say that I have not decided a person was not indictable for practicing the profession of teaching without a certificate. I held that an indictment would not lie under section 38 of the Revenue Act of 1897, but suggested that such a person might be indicted on the ground that when a statute makes the commission or omission of an act unlawful and specifies no mode of proceeding, the violation of its provisions is a misdemeanor punishable by indictment at common law. State vs. Parker, 91 N. C. 650. State vs. Bloodworth, 94 N. C. 918."

Mr. Walser thinks there may be case before the Supreme court at this session involing this question, as many teachers in the State have gone to teach ing without a certificate.
