

Personalities

C. FELIX HARVEY III

This young man pictured here has the impressive task of being the third in a line of illustrious C. Felix Harveys and today he carries on his shoulders a great many of the multitudinous headaches, heartaches and responsibilities of the tremendous business that his father and grandfathers have built in Eastern Carolina.

To those who knew him in even younger days he still remains "Sonny" and in spite of the extremely large nature of his present position as President of L. Harvey and Son Co. he is still best described and best known as "Sonny."

Harvey today has accepted the job of filling to a degree the shoes of his uncle, Leo Harvey, chairman of the board of directors of the local corporation which controls such a big segment of this section's affairs.

Being the top man in a considerable organization such as he is president of did not come easily to Young Harvey. His nature and his desires are more closely attuned to his one job that he likes most, dairying. If he were not by the force of birth placed in such a spot of responsibility Harvey has said that he'd rather be running Pinecrest Dairy, of which he is a principal owner, than knocking himself out behind a desk in the principal office of the Harvey Company in downtown Kinston.

It is always difficult for a young man to step into a spot created and then vacated by an older man who has set up an extremely high standard of work and success. "Sonny" is one young man who knows perhaps better than any other in this section the hard truth of this kind of thing. Filling his Uncle Leo's big brogans is a killing proposition of endless hours of work and planning interrupted throughout every working hour with decisions that involve considerable hunks of cash and the lives of a great many people.

For well over a year now the younger Harvey has been gradually growing into those big boots of his uncle. Many today feel that with his continued growth into the many facets of his family's many holdings "Sonny" will very likely do an excellent job of filling those boots and in some respects may be able to do an even better job than his predecessor who had to spend a good many of his formative years wrestling with the business while it was wrestling with the depression of the 30's.

Felix is rushing headlong into his middle 30's and his receding hairline seems to contradict his nickname, "Sonny." There is another nickname applied to Harvey while he was at the University of North Carolina and by which he still is known in a great many places. Derivation of this pseudonym is obscured by time and the convenient memories of those who dubbed him: "Jeep." Which is, it might be added, a peculiar tag for a Buick dealer.

Harvey served in the Navy for three rugged years during World War II in which he saw plenty of action in the Pacific area as Captain of a PT boat. After the worst of the struggle was over he was assigned to crash boat duty at Ocracoke and emerged from the services in 1946 as a Lieutenant and as a married man.

His wife, a Pitt County girl, Margaret Little Blount, is a native of Bethel. They have one daughter, Leigh.

Harvey since the end of the war has taken a continuing interest in civic affairs and it was largely through his efforts that the Kinston Junior Chamber of Commerce became the first North Carolina organization to own a home, which has been put to many uses as is known as the Jaycee Youth Center. It is built on land given to the Jaycees by Harvey's company.

More recently Harvey has put a lot of time, some thought and a considerable bit of money in promoting a dairy calf chain in Lenoir County among 4-H Club members.

He may appear to be the busiest fellow in seven counties but if you want to talk dairying he'll stop and if you stop him on this subject he is prepared to listen because he may not be the world's most eloquent speaker but Golden Guernseys he is a regular William Jennings Bryan.

Harvey also fancies himself as something of a fisherman but in this avocation as is with most others of the calling he is usually more inclined to remember the ones that got away.

"Sonny" is a pretty nice sort of fellow even for a corporation president.

Ninth 1952 Traffic Death Claims Life of Three Year Old Child

Just after six o'clock Tuesday afternoon Three Year-old Margaret Ann Seymour, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Seymour of Dupreeville, was walking down the highway near her home with her grandmother, Mrs. Addie Merritt. The child suddenly pulled loose from her grandmother's grasp and darted into the path of a car driven by L. C. Capps of Jacksonville. A few minutes later the child died at Parrott Memorial Hospital before treatment could be started.

Coroner Raymond Jarman said Tuesday night that investigation of the tragedy had revealed that Capps was not driving fast and that the sudden action of the child forced the accident into the "unavoidable" category.

Budget Commission Has Problem Beyond Budget In Scott-Coltrane Battle

Members of the Advisory Budget Commission are up in the air, State Senator John D. Larkins, as chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, is one of the six members of this group. The thing that has the commission up in the air is the request made by Governor Kerr Scott for the resignation of D. S. Coltrane, assistant director of the budget commission.

A meeting held Tuesday morning in Raleigh by the group led to the conclusion that the Governor might not be able to fire Coltrane but there was no doubt whatever about his ability to completely strip Coltrane of all powers. Under the 1925 Act which set up the Executive Budget Commission the Governor is all powerful Larkins and his associates agree.

On July 15th the biennial visits of the budget commission are supposed to begin to all state agencies and institutions to accept budgets from the many department heads. Larkins says the advisory group which will very likely be without the services of Coltrane, or at least the effective services of the man who knows the most about what has to be done is in a quandary about the immediate path ahead.

Under the act which sets the commission up the chairman of the senate and house finance and appropriations committee are members of the group along with two members named by the governor. Scott named Lon Edwards of Greene County and Harry Caldwell of Guilford County to the board and Larkins, Larry Moore of Wilson, E. T. Bost of Concord and Hampton Price of Leaksville are members by virtue of their legislative positions.

The governor has full power to accept in full or refuse in full everything recommended by his advisory budget commission and he can, under the law, write his own budget. This could develop into an extremely embarrassing situation to the incoming administration which might have to trim huge hunks off of an outside budget of the type Scott has been accustomed to backing in the past.

The group is scheduled to begin its hearing on July 14th and on the 16th it will be at the State Hospital at Goldsboro, Caswell Training School and the Dobbs Farm at Kinston. Between now and the time decision will have to be reached by Coltrane and the advisory group as to what policy will be followed in face of Scott's unusual demand for Coltrane's resignation.

One prediction seems fairly apparent, however, from all of this uncertainty and that is the extremely likely possibility of the budget commission being considerably changed by the 1953 General Assembly.

According to reports from the Securities Exchange Commission there were 23 men in the United States whose salary checks, bonus payments, and retirement benefits amounted to more than a quarter million dollars in 1951. This list does not include persons whose income is naturally well above that mark from earnings on stocks and bonds.

Head man on the list is General Motors President Charles E. Wilson, who knocked off $583,256 in 1951 for running the world's largest flivver factories. No. 2 on the payroll parade was Crawford Greenewalt, president of the Du Pont Company, whose accumulated gross pay reached past the half-million mark to $519,600.

The third man on this wonderful parade was another General Motors Big Shot, Executive Vice President Albert Bradley, who managed to cart home, before taxes, a neat $506,787. These three gentlemen were the only salaried folks in the nation last year whose pay checks passed the half-million mark.

Others in the above-$250,000 area, not in order, were Harlowe H. Curtice, Ronald K. Evans, Louis Goad, Frederick G. Donner and Harry Klinger all of General Motors. K. T. Keller, L. L. Colbert and B. E. Hutchinson, top brass for the Chrysler Corporation, Angus B. Echols, du Pont VP, Charles McCarthy (not the dummy but Allied Stores President), Seton Porter, bossman of Seagrams Ltd., Ralph J. Cordner, President of General Electric; Nicholas M. Schenck, Louis B. Mayer and Edgar Mlinix of Loews, Inc.; Thomas J. Watson, president of International Business Machines; J. F. Drake, chairman of the Gulf Oil Company; Eugene Grace and Arthur B. Homer, top men at Bethlehem Steel and Benjamin Fairless, of U. S. Steel.
