

EASY DOES IT

POTS AND PANS that are really clean, bright and shining are beautiful to see and they'll also do a much more efficient cooking job for you than will soiled and stained ones.

Dark films which often dull the surface of aluminumware can be removed by boiling a cream of tartar solution in the pan for a few minutes. Use 2 teaspoons cream of tartar to one quart of water.

Bleaches should never be used on aluminum because the chlorine reacts with the aluminum and discolors it even more.

Average stains which accumulate on aluminum can be removed with steel wool. For spun aluminum, use the pads in the direction of the lines on the utensil.

Stainless steel needs little care because it is highly resistant to stains. When it's necessary to

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Nuggets
(Makes 36)

- 1 cup peanut butter
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 1/2 cups sweetened condensed milk
- 1 cup seeded raisins
- 1/4 teaspoon salt

Combine peanut butter and lemon juice. Gradually stir in condensed milk, then add raisins and salt. Drop from teaspoon on greased baking sheet about one inch apart. Bake in a moderate (350°F.) oven for about 10 minutes.

brighten it, use a mild vinegar-water solution and let simmer on the range.

Copper-bottomed utensils should be kept bright and shiny with special cleaners made for the purpose of cleaning the bottoms. Use it periodically as pans do stain simply from use on the range.

All-copper utensils must be washed with hot soap and water, or detergent, rinsed thoroughly, then dried well. Hard-to-remove stains often respond to rubbing with a salted lemon section or salt and vinegar. Rinse after this application.

Cast iron needs hot water and soap or detergent for regular cleaning. Rinse well and then use baking soda in the last rinse water to retard rusting. Utensils should be thoroughly dry before putting away to prevent rusting.
