Liberalism

EXTENSION OF REMARKS
HON. A. WILLIS ROBERTSON
Of Virginia
In The Senate of The United States

Thursday, January 12, 1956

MR. ROBERTSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Appendix of the Record an editorial entitled "A Call to Liberalism," written by David Lawrence and published in the January 13, 1956, issue of U. S. News & World report.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

A Call To Liberalism (By David Lawrence)

Liberalism has been undergoing a steady erosion. The so-called liberalism of today is a philosophy of coercionism in conflict with the spirit and letter of the Constitution. It is not true liberalism.

Time was when liberalism meant freedom from excessive government — freedom from encroachment upon the rights of the people.

Time was when the 10th amendment to the Constitution was as sacred as any other provision of the Bill of Rights about which we hear so much from today's liberals. This amendment says:

"The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

Control of education, of course was one of the powers reserved to the States and to the people. The power of the Federal Judiciary has until recently been exercised to set forth standards of education or to examine and rule upon the psychological influences that may or may not prevail in the classroom.

Today the Supreme Court has proclaimed that the Federal judiciary has the right to determine who shall or shall not attend public schools. This disregards the wishes of the States as expressed in their laws and receptive constitutions. It is a short step now to the selection of teachers and to the designation of a curriculum by Federal authority.

Today's liberal acquiesces in this usurpation of Federal power.

Control of employment has hitherto been a right reserved to the people — the right of the individual to work or to refrain from working, and the right of the employer to hire or to refrain from hiring. Neither the States nor the Federal Government were ever given the right to interfere with the freedom of individuals to contract for goods or service.

purposes a grand total of $4,940,059.70. Of that total the Kinston schools received $1,714,194.42, which is 34.74 per cent of the total. So, instead of chairman Carr viewing with alarm the burden being carried by the county's ruling elders he ought to be railing hell with them for not giving Kinston more. More on the basis of total student enrollment and more on the basis of total taxes paid: Last year the tax list for Kinston was $34,510,115 which was just over 45 per cent of the total valuation for the county of $76,028,726.

Until last year when a sudden jump in the rural listing came with a ten million dollar addition made by the Du Pont plant the city had been paying well over half of the taxes for the entire county. And now with the extension of the city limits to include almost 1,000 more homes it is likely that Kinston will again be paying more than half the total county taxes.

But this is not to split the rural and the urban peoples of Lenoir County for we're all in this boat together. It merely is to repeat something we have said on this page over and over again, to wit: It is immoral, illegal and against all common sense for the people of Kinston to be clubbed twice for county projects while folks in the country are being struck only once. The list of duplicate appropriations includes the library, the health department, the Recorder's Court, the National Guard, Civil Defense, Fat Stock Show appropriations. These are projects in which people from the entire county share. They should be paid for on a county-wide basis. When a 50-50 appropriation is made by Kinston and county officials the people in Kinston wind up paying all of the city's half and 45 per cent of the county's half, which gives them a total share of just under 75 per cent in the project.

Carr ought to study a little more closely the fiscal affairs of the entire county, rather than losing his head and going off into the wild blue yonder as he reportedly did in his speech to the Harvey School PTA.

Polio isn't licked yet. This is a fact that is being brought to public attention in this county and throughout the country this week as volunteer workers opened the 1956 March of Dimes. The drive for funds to carry on the polio fight will continue here throughout the month.

Thousands of polio patients still need aid, according to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. And many of these depend on iron lungs and other mechanical devices for the very breath of life.

"To stop aid now," a statement from March of Dimes headquarters said, "would be like pulling the electric plug from an iron lung."

The treatment of a single polio patient often costs thousands of dollars and extends over many years. "It is not enough to save a life," a March of Dimes spokesman said. "The job isn't finished until we have done everything possible to make that life worth living again."

includes maintenance of 14 respirator centers where medical specialists study methods of restoring the ability to breathe, and demonstrate new techniques so that this knowledge can be applied in hospitals all over the country.

More than 50 per cent of this year's March of Dimes need is for patient aid. March of Dimes funds will be spent also in research programs which may save future generations from the crippling disease. The Salk vaccine was developed through a March of Dimes grant. Volunteer workers are needed here to push the drive which will end January 31. The minimum need for this year's program is $47,000,000.
