WASHINGTON REPORT

By Bill Whaley

Men of letters spend a lot of time pondering the use, sound, arrangement and effect of words. (They probably consider a lot of other things, too.)

Be that as it may, people in public life get many lessons each day in how the written word can be used. There still brings all sorts of expressions of needs and desires, wishes and wants.

Last week, Sen. W. Kerr Scott was looking through some of the mail he had received recently, and came up with some dandies.

One letter-written sounded like a true-blue Democrat. He ended a long letter with the penetrating declaration, "I am a Conservative Democrat and I want to see a progressive Democratic administration."

Another written had foot trouble. He wrote: "I am complaining about my feet that are flat and badly callused and stay like they are on ice all the time."

Many of the letters concerned servicemen.

Here are a few sample quotes: "Dear Sir. Hear I am in regard to my son hoo is bidding time at Leavenworth which he received from the Army."

"I cannot get heads or tails out of them for replacements, and I am service-connected on my teeth."

"Would you have the Department of Personnel, Department of the Navy, send me an affidavit giving the full particulars about the Medal-of-Honor that was placed in my hand Nov.3, 1938, along with my Bad Conduct Discharge."

"I have a Bad Conduct Discharge and would like to have you help in exchanging it for unfavorable."

"If this boy could be transferred nearer home, I believe it would help his mother's morale." And some writers just pass on good things:

"I hope you are feeling fine. I am fine, but would be much sicker if I had a job."

Some vividly describe their views:

"I am not a law broker. I am a good Republican. I don't chew tobacco or gamble or drink Whiskey." (Note: There is a nasty rumor out saying the GOP is having trouble recruiting new members.)

Others indicate they have finally wised up:

"My wife needs a check up on her head."

And to top it off, a close observer put it this way: "It just goes to prove that even United States Senators pull on their pants one leg at a time."

LIVING ROOM STORAGE

Make your living room a place where family members will enjoy spending leisure time. Provide space for reading, playing, talking, and playing music. You will want good storage space for books, magazines, sheet music, records, games, tables, and musical instruments.

Storage space can do much to make your living room attractive, livable, and convenient — shelves built in to hold books, magazines, and sheet music; cabinets to hold games, toys, and accessories; closets for card tables, musical instruments, and firewood. Where it is impossible to provide storage space in the living room, use an adjoining hall or room nearby. And build your storage space to suit your family's needs.
