SAM ERVIN ★ SAYS ★

In last week's column I promised to go into more detail about the provisions of the recently-passed Senator labor reform bill, the so-called Kennedy-Ervin Bill.

Included in the major provisions of the bill are these safeguards.

Union members are authorized to call reports and union officials are required to report possible financial conflicts of interest.

Persons convicted of certain felonies are barred from union office within five years after their release from prison.

Criminal sanctions are imposed for embezzlement of union funds, false reporting, false entries on books, failure to report, or destruction of union books.

Union members are authorized to sue for recovery of funds embezzled or misappropriated by union officers.

America's working men and women are guaranteed the fundamental right of the secret ballot in selecting their union officers and a majority of the members of a local union are permitted to remove crooked officials at any time.

Fair election procedures, regular elections, due notice of all union elections, and the opportunity to nominate opposing candidates are provided.

"Sweetheart" contracts are hit by penalizing the giver and taker of a bribe in labor-management relations.

Comprehensive detailed reporting of union economic and administrative data is compelled so the members and public may know what is happening.

Terms of national officers of unions are limited to five years and local union officers to three years.

The vicious "hot cargo" clause in the trucking industry is outlawed and the enforcement of existing contracts containing such clauses is prevented.

It prohibits picketing for nine months where a union has had an election and lost it.

Picketing for extortion is outlawed.

Loans to union officers by employers or unions are prohibited.

Solicitation or payment of fictitious fees for unloading cargo from interstate carriers is prohibited.

Fiduciary obligations are required of union officials.

It outlaws the use of union funds for personal enrichment rather than for legitimate union purposes.

The Kennedy-Ervin bill requires national unions to file reports on local affiliates they place under trusteeship, establishing standards for imposing trusteeships and limiting the duration of such trusteeships to 12 months unless the national union can provide proof of the necessity for an extension.

Safeguards for trusteeship funds are provided.

Legislating in labor-management relationships is not an easy assignment. I feel that progress has been made by the Senate so that corruption in some unions and some management can be eliminated or drastically reduced below the intolerable conditions that now exist.
