GARDEN TIME

Spring did come to the State Fair Arena in February as I told you it would in an earlier column. However, it exceeded all expectations for variety, freshness and blended beauty. The first Southeastern Flower and Garden Show will end tomorrow and dates for the 1962 show have been announced, March 2-6.

This first attempt to bring an event of this magnitude to Raleigh and North Carolina is the finest example of organized effort that I have experienced during my many years of service to North Carolina horticulture. The thrill of accomplishment exemplifies the caliber of leadership associated with the project and far outweighs any individual or group credit.

There was something for everyone to enjoy. Artistry, beautiful and symbolic. A Japanese garden with exotic flowers, bamboo, and sandals on the door step. An eccentric fountain, blending in color with massed chrysanthemums. Petals, shedding from saucer magnolias and dropping like colored snow into beds of fragrant hyacinths. A bob white perched on a rustic rail fence whistling to his mate while the tall Jack-in-the-pulpit and the dainty lady slipper listened. You could almost hear the wind whispering through the white pines and hemlock.

Roses in great variety — tiny miniatures, floribundas and hybrid teas in all of their fragrant beauty. An old-fashioned herb and vegetable garden, complemented by English box and crab apple blossoms. A beach garden with everything but the gently rolling surf. Hundreds of orchids in a setting of breathtaking beauty competing with camellias for a place in the sun. The blending of brick and mortar in harmonious colors and unusual patterns. An azalea-camellia garden symbolic of the Old South and yet as modern as the space age. Beautiful girls, from our famous Village, in the spot-light around a swimming pool garden.

Around every gentle curve in the garden walls was something fresh and exciting, and a new idea from the "Gardens for Living" to carry home for the enjoyment of the entire family.

Fashion Show Set Thursday Night at 8

The Young Fashion Show and Sewing Contest will be held Thursday night at 8 in the Trenton Womens Clubhouse. Two judges will be on hand and Mrs. John Hughes Pollock will be moderator at the show.

The contest, sponsored by the Federation of Womens Clubs, is being held for club women and home economic students at Jones Central High School. Everyone is invited to attend this meeting.

Winners from the local contest will then be seen in the 12th District contest, which also will be held in Trenton. Winners from Beaufort, Oriental, Jacksonville, and Kinston will be here, with the District Chairman of Fine Arts and Crafts, Miss Grace Wilson of Beaufort.

Also present for this showing will be Mrs. Horace Loftin, 12th District President of the Womens Club from Beaufort. This will take place March 24 at 7:30 in the clubhouse.
