Three Kinston Men Given Long Terms in Pitt County Crimes

Three Kinston men Tuesday morning were given long prison terms in Pitt County Superior Court after a jury on Monday found them each guilty of breaking, entering and larceny and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill.

Arthur Goff, Kenneth Grant and Bruce Clark were charged with breaking in a Stokes supermarket on the night of July 17, 1960. White Grant and Clark were in the store, Goff, the lookout, engaged in a rifle pistol duel with Constable William H. Crandall, who came upon the robbery.

Goff, using an automatic .22 caliber rifle, critically wounded the constable and the trio made good its escape. They were not arrested for this crime until July of this year. Grant in the interim had been given a five-to-seven year prison term for breaking into Exum's store in Snow Hill.

Judge Walter Bone of Nashville, who is presiding over the current term of Pitt County Superior Court, gave Goff two terms to run consecutively: Seven-to-ten years for the shooting and three-to-five years for larceny.

Grant also drew two sentences to run consecutively, and the first to begin at the expiration of his Green County sentence. His two Pitt County terms were of three-to-five years each.

Clark drew two consecutive terms of two-to-three years each.

EDITORIAL

To Jones County Parents

This week among the news items sent to the Journal was one from the Jones Central High School Chapter of the Future Homemakers of America, and tucked in this item is continuing evidence of the pious brainwashing that is being done at practically every cultural level to the children of our state, nation and particularly of Jones County.

Among the "goals" for the FHA this school year is "To promote good will through getting to know our neighbors at home and abroad. Then in the October through February program the first on the agenda is "Prejudice: How Do People Get That Way?", second on the agenda, "Your Human Rights," third "Christmas Around the World."

The Journal is prejudiced against white people who are ashamed of their color, and of black people who are ashamed of their color.

The Journal is prejudiced against the schools, churches, newspapers or any other media of communication cultivating a simpering, pious collection of apologists.

The Journal is prejudiced against people who accept and promote the outright lie that the negro has been and is being persecuted in the South.

The Journal is prejudiced against this subtle brainwashing of our children that goes on constantly, cleverly and effectively under our very noses.

Savannah Subdivision In High State Confusion

Meetings, rumors and a few scattered, but hard to come by facts are part of the high state of confusion that exists this week over a residential subdivision for negroes that has been, or is being promoted just between Savannah High School and Savannah Baptist Church in the upper part of Lenoir County.

Around the first of August J. C. Langston granted a 90-day option to Joe G. Henry of New Bern for the 17 acre tract of land that was to be subdivided and sold off for residential lots between the two large negro religious and educational institutions.

A considerable number of lots were sold — either on the basis of a down payment or in a few instances of cash payments in full to Henry.

Kinston Surveyor Robert Strickland was employed to lay out the subdivision which is located in a peaty, badly drained swamp area that has never been felt to be of value to anything except frogs and mosquitoes.

On Saturday a mass meeting was called for 2 p. m. at Savannah Church to bring some light to the problem.

The problem was the indictment of Henry in Craven County on a charge of embezzlement by his former employer, Nationwide Homes, a distributor of "shell-type homes" in Eastern North Carolina.

Thursday night Floyd Pledger, New Bern manager of Nationwide Homes, met with the Savannah group and explained that his company had no connection with the option on the Langston property, nor with the proposed subdivision plans of Henry.

The embezzlement charges against Henry have no connection with the Lenoir County transaction, but stemmed from alleged misuse of other funds of the company.

Pledger asked Lenoir County Sheriff Clay Broadway to furnish him an escort to the Thursday night meeting, because of the reported high feelings in the community over the mixup and the absence of their funds.

At the Saturday meeting a relative of Henry reportedly showed up and waved a roll of money before the gathering and told the investors they had nothing to worry about, but none asked for and none got his money back that had been paid Henry for lots in the subdivision.

The option from Langston to Henry has not been exercised, nor has it been recorded in the office of Lenoir County Register of Deeds Catherine Cooke. The option called for the sale of the 17 acres of pocosin land by Langston to Henry for $500 per acre.
