Veterans With Term Insurance Should Consider Its Conversion

Since many North Carolina World War II veterans have been carrying term-GI life insurance for 15 years or more, they should give serious thought to planning their insurance futures before the spiraling cost of term insurance becomes prohibitive.

This word of caution was voiced today by J. D. DeRamus, Manager, Veterans Administration regional office in Winston-Salem, in reminding veterans who are counting on life-term protection from their GI policies that the premiums on term insurance increase as they grow older.

Term insurance affords maximum protection at minimum cost during the early post-service years needed to establish a home and a budget designed for building the future. However, term insurance is seldom suitable for protection in a policyholder's advanced age, DeRamus pointed out.

"Term premiums increase every five years, not too badly in the early years, but rapidly in the advanced years," he said. "A $10,000 term policy at age 40 carries a gross annual premium of only $102, but at age 65 it jumps to $476.40 annually — and $741.60 at age 70."

DeRamus said the way out is conversion of all or part of the term policy to any of the permanent-type plans available, where premium rates remain the same from year to year.

In addition, permanent insurance has a cash surrender, extended insurance, paid up insurance and loan value. Term insurance has none of these, he explained.
