Attic May Contain Valuable Pieces of Fine Furniture

By Mrs. Faytie C. Gray

Have you checked your attic lately, or that of a relatives' for a usable piece of discarded furniture?

Mrs. Harper Gray of Route 2 Trenton located an old wash stand at the home of her husband's grandmother. She contacted her Home Agent for directions of refinishing.

In spite of the fun her husband and daughter made of her, she refinished this furniture, and now has a lovely side piece for her living room.

Mrs. Gray proceeded in the following way:

1. The furniture was cleaned and sanded carefully, and deep scratches filled.

2. An oil stain of red mahogany was prepared and applied and rubbed with an old nylon stocking - then allowed to dry for at least 24 hours. (This usually requires two applications.)

3. A stain sealer with a varnish base was used to finish the furniture. When dry, this was rubbed with 2/0 steel wool and wiped clean with a cloth dampened in turpentine.

4. A light wax may be applied or a good furniture polish, to protect the surface.

5. After shopping around, Mrs. Gray located hardware of the original type, and attached to the drawer and doors.

Does the success of Mrs. Gray entice you to look in your attic? If you wish directions for refinishing any furniture you find there, the President to consider cutting off federal funds for Mississippi because of racial conditions in that state. This was an unwise recommendation which will not solve the problems confronting the people of Mississippi.

When all is said, racial problems can be solved only by good will, intelligence, and patience on the local level where men and women live, move, and have their being. Solutions not based on human experience and wisdom cannot be dictated from above, either by administrators holding executive offices, or legislators occupying legislative offices, or judges wearing judicial robes.

If the Commission's recommendations were adopted, it would certainly be contrary to our system of government. The President of the United States has no legislative power, and therefore has no power to add any additional conditions or terms to the acts of Congress in providing for federal grants to any state, community, or group of individuals otherwise eligible to receive federal funds. Congress has wisely refrained from placing conditions on grants which would force people to abrogate their right to govern themselves under local laws.

Advocates of such impractical measures only add to the racial problems. Such problems cannot be solved by overriding the will of
