Soil Stewardship Week Being Observed 19-26th

Jones Countians are being asked to join millions of people all over America in the observance of Soil Stewardship Week, May 19 through May 26.

Charlie Davis, Chairman of the Lower Neuse Soil and Water Conservation District, said the observance underscores the role that every citizen has in meeting the responsibilities of protection and wise use of soil, water, and other related sources.

Each year for the past nine this observance has been sponsored by the National Association of Conservation Districts. The theme this year is "We Turn Our Eyes to the Future." Booklets and other materials have been made available to local ministers to help them prepare sermons on soil stewardship.

Conservation leaders recognize that conservation and development problems are increasing and not diminishing. Although the work of halting soil erosion and other forms of land damage is now well begun, other and probably more difficult resource tasks are rapidly taking form.

These tasks include land planning and land use for housing, highways, food, fiber, and recreation, water use priorities, and other needs of a growing society.

The observance of Soil Stewardship Week is an outgrowth of events which took place more than 15 centuries ago in Vienna, France. Bad weather, earthquakes, and human suffering inspired the Bishop of Vienna to implore God for help and deliverance from the calamities which beset them.

Hairy Indigo Recommended For Soil Building by Waller

Hairy indigo is one of the most promising plants today for soil improvement and protection on sandy soils according to Emmett Waller, Soil Conservationist. It is a plant non-toxic to poultry and livestock and is suggested as a replacement green manure plant for the once popular crotalaria.

Used as a summer cover crop, hairy indigo can yield many benefits. It adds organic matter and improves the soil structure. In addition to increased water holding capacity in sandy soils, it adds nitrogen and provides protection from wind and water erosion.

Hairy indigo is a summer annual legume adapted to most of the well drained soils of this area. An upright plant, it grows to a height of three to seven feet and will yield four to eight tons of dry organic matter per acre.

Although it starts slowly at first, it will grow rapidly later in the

Home for North Carolina Boys Set up, Endowed Last Week by Miss Hyatt

Last Thursday a non-profit corporation charter was filed in the office of Lenoir County Clerk of Court setting up the Hyatt Memorial Home for Underprivileged Boys.

On Friday Miss Delia Hyatt, who had the corporation chartered, transferred by deed all her property in Lenoir County, subject to her life estate, to this corporation.

Miss Hyatt also named to be trustees of the home Lamar Jones, J. D. Woolard, Charlie Larkins Jr. and her business manager, W. J. Thomas. They will serve with her in setting up the home. A site has not been selected yet for the home.

Miss Hyatt's property in Lenoir, Jones, Craven, Onslow and Carteret counties in North Carolina and other properties in Florida and Washington, D. C. is conservatively estimated to be worth over $2½ million dollars.

The full text of the release, announcing the program follows here:

"Miss Delia Hyatt on April 29, 1963, caused to be created a corporation known as the HYATT MEMORIAL HOME FOR BOYS in the office of the Secretary of State of North Carolina. This is the first step in her plans to create a home for underprivileged boys in the state of North Carolina and to appropriate and endow all her property to the construction and maintenance of the said home. The home is to be dedicated to the memory of Miss Hyatt's family. It is the culmination of many plans and dreams that the Hyatt family has always had, to provide in some small measure towards the development of the underprivileged boys in the state of North Carolina who have not been as fortunate in material and spiritual things as the Hyatts have been.

"The home is not to be a correctional institution but is to be a real home with all emphasis being placed on attention, devotion, and a wholesome atmosphere for young boys whose own circumstances do not so afford. The directors have been selected by Miss Hyatt. The selection was made because she felt that these person would most nearly carry out her desires in the maintenance of the boys home. It is a non profit corporation, non sectarian, and the boys are to be afforded their own opportunity for religious development in the faith of their choice.

"If for any reason this home is not successful due to the lack of interest or funds, it is Miss Hyatt's wish that all the things that she has donated to the home be used in assisting the boys in the state of North Carolina in securing a college education at any college or university in the state he so desires."
