

GARDEN TIPS
by a gardener
in a state college

Now that plants are green and growing it is a good time to take pencil and paper and check over your entire landscape. It is rare that some mistakes are not made in planning and planting. I will mention a few and I am sure that you can think of others that may need attention during the summer, fall or winter.

Are walks and drives properly placed to serve the family needs? Is the garage large enough to accommodate the new "cat" and also provide room for lawn mower, bicycles and garden tools? Is the play area for the children located so it can be observed from the work areas in the house? Do down spouts empty on a walk, driveway, path or terrace?

Are trees creating a problem? They may have seemed appropriately placed when planted but now after 10 or 15 years may be giving trouble. This is particularly true if planted too close to the house or under power lines where constant cutting back may ruin their character and attractiveness.

Are large growing shrubs screening outside views from windows? If so, frequent and sometimes drastic pruning may spoil their beauty. Perhaps they should be replaced. Do not expect much from your vegetable garden if the plants are competing with large trees. Most vegetables require full sun and will not produce well if shaded and competing with tree roots for moisture and nutrients.

If you are having trouble with grass roots invading your flower bed or border you can stop this by erecting a barrier of old brick, 4 x 8 x 16 cinder or concrete blocks or aluminum sheets purchased from your garden center. An attractive fence and/or a hedge may be needed for privacy or for screening out unsightly objects.

Outdoor living is a popular activity and can be included in the home grounds at very little added expense. A shaded area, picnic table and some lawn chairs are the essentials. It can always be used when friends drop in unexpectedly. A fireplace or portable charcoal grill may be used for cooking. The portable grill is very popular and easily moved about and stored.

Muggy Weather Brings Mildew

Any homemaker who has had clothing damaged by mildew will agree that precautions against this household annoyance are well worth taking.

Molds causing mildew have a liking for moisture, darkness and warmth. Unfortunately, clothing stored during muggy summer weather can provide the perfect setting for mold growth. However, the careful homemaker can protect her family's clothing against mildew damage, says Miss Mary Em Lee, clothing specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service.

Cleanliness, good ventilation, and dry atmosphere are effective weapons against closet mildew. Soil on clothing can supply nutrients for molds. Always wash or dry clean clothing before you store it. Hang clothes as loosely as possible, so air can circulate around them. Store shoes, suitcases, and other leather goods on shelves.

Miss Lee says chemical to dry the air can also help combat mildew. Silica gel, activated alumina and calcium chloride, often sold under trade names, help control mold growth by absorbing moisture from the air. Silica gel and activated alumina are not harmful to fabrics and can be hung in cloth bags in closets, placed in open containers on closet floors or spread in the folds of clothing stored in drawers, boxes or trunks. Calcium chloride can be placed in open containers in closets. However it should not come into contact with fabrics since it can make holes in them.

"Paradichlorobenzene, often used for moth control, also controls mildew," says Miss Lee. "But since it damages some plastics, you should remove buttons, ornaments, and hangers made of plastic before using paradichlorobenzene."

A few precautions can keep mildew damage from clothing and fabrics not in storage. You should dry soiled clothes, towels, and washclothes before putting them in a hamper. Keep wet shower curtains stretched out. They are likely to mildew if left bunched together or stuck to the wall or tub. If you find you've sprinkled more laundry than you have time to iron in a day, dry and air it. Dampened rolled-up clothes are an open invitation to mildew-molds.

CLOSING ONE WAREHOUSE

This week the Kinston Tobacco Board of Trade announced that Star Warehouse No. 1 would be closed this year, but that its selling time would be used by Star Warehouse No. 2 and by Brooks and the Farmers and New Dixie Warehouses.
