NEWS OF ORANGE COUNTY

Parable: Enforced Extremism

A samaritan went out among the righteously disgruntled countrymen. And they said to him "Set us free, for we have been wronged." And he saw their plight and was deeply moved.

And he said to them "You are correct. You have been wronged. The burden of the sins against you is upon me. I shall talk to my people, and we must free you."

Then they said to him, "Free us now! You talk of freedom but you do not set us free. We do not believe you, nor any of your kin who have so long oppressed us."

The samaritan, realizing that he could not effectively wrest their immediate freedom, begged for their understanding, and for their help, pleading that the way must be prepared for their freedom.

But they would not listen to him. And they set upon him and they slew him. Then their masters in turn took revenge and slew many persons having claims against said estate to present them to the undersigned before the 10th day of June, 1964, otherwise this notice will be pleaded in bar of their recovery. All persons indebted to said estate will please make immediate settlement.

This the 10th day of June, 1963.

of their number. The dilemma of decision of the number one topic of current community interest in Chapel Hill is that of enforced extremism.

That is to say, in the eyes of many persons vitally concerned, and of beholders locally and abroad, there is no decision open as to one's sentiments on a public accommodations ordinance for Chapel Hill except those at the extremes.

If one is against it, regardless of his motivations, he is lumped with the extreme conservatives, with whom he may have little or nothing in common.

If he favors it he is lumped with the extreme militants, with whom he may have only a moral, rather than a practical and temperamental accord.

While he may agree with the objectives and ends of either extreme he may not in all good conscience agree with the means to that end. And if he does not agree with the means to that end, the futility is that he can in this instance find no home with those whose convictions he basically shares.

This internal tug-of-war is continuing within the conscience of many persons of equally good will. The provocation of public conscience on this issue of basic morality and practical goals is good. All humanity should be constructively disturbed over the unjustified intolerance of man against his fellow man.

But the same spirit of Christian brotherhood that is legitimately claimed by those who drive militantly toward their honorable goals should also grant to those persons with whom they do not agree as to means to the same end, a fair share of the integrity which the militants automatically attribute to themselves.
