

Musical Chairs On Queen Street Soon

In the near future a game of "musical chairs" will be played on one of the busiest corners of Queen Street in downtown Kinston.

Recent negotiations between the Wachovia Bank folks and the Tull heirs have resulted in property settlements that will make this switching of "seats" possible, and necessary.

Wachovia has not yet completed its plans for a new home on an expanded site but its local boss, Bill Bowen, says planning is being done and it is too early yet to say if a completely new building will be built or if major renovations will be made in the existing building.

Morris Foxman, owner and operator of Foxman's Jewelry Store, says his firm will move one "chair" to the north and occupy the area now occupied by Ramsey Realty Company and the Singer Sewing Machine shop. Foxman says he will have a new and modern facility from the front door to the back.

Cabell Ramsey of the Realty company and officials of the sewing machine company have not yet picked out a "chair" but obviously they will have to in the very near future.

This corner was occupied for generations by the landmark Tull Hotel, which gave way in the 30's to a grocery store and in the 40's the grocery store stepped aside to see the corner becoming a banking facility.

Foxman's has been in this location since 1935 and although it will be moving it will not move so far that it's old friends cannot find it.

Jones County Girl Reports on Meeting She Attended Recently

By Janice Lowey

The 36th Annual Meeting of the American Institute of Cooperation was held recently at East Lansing, Michigan, on the campus of Michigan State University.

The meeting was officially opened on Sunday night with a Meditation Program given on the "Challenge For A Decisive Generation."

After the program, the group assembled in the Kellogg Center for a get-acquainted party. At the party the delegates found that there were boys and girls from all around the country who were attending this meeting.

The following morning the delegates attended the "Thought For The Day" and later the Eye-Opener presented by the National F.F.A. President and by the National 4-H Representative.

After Lunch the Keynote Speaker, Russell G. Mawby, presented a talk on "Cooperatives — Community Resources" and this was the topic for the discussion sessions later on in the afternoon.

The evening assembly consisted of the presentation of the 4-H Scholarship Awards, A cooperative Demonstration, The Cooperative Farm Business Project, and the F. F. A. Chapter Plaques.

On the following day the delegates went on tours of Cooperatives and on one of the campus of Michigan State University.

On Tuesday evening, a banquet was held and afterwards the V.I.P.s (Very Important Persons) representing the different organizations at the meeting spoke to the group. The Eye-Opener on Wednesday morning was indeed an eye-opener for it was on "Cows, Kids, and Co-ops," and when it was over, we delegates were given a quiz on Cooperatives.

Since Wednesday was the last day, we were given free time to do what we would like.

For recreation on the last night, a five-piece band played for the group. After three full days of activities, the American Institute of Cooperation had come to a close and would meet again next year in Missouri. This is a meeting that is educational and enjoyable for it is well organized and well executed.

I encourage the 4-H'ers in North Carolina to work very diligently in the Farmer Cooperative Program. This program will teach one a great deal and if this person works hard, he may be able to have the trip of a lifetime to Missouri, as I had in Michigan.
