

Disabled Veterans' Children Eligible for Scholarships

By the opening day of school, forty children of living veterans of North Carolina who are totally and permanently disabled from service-connected causes have been approved by the Veterans Administration for study under the War Orphans Education Assistance program.

Many more children in North Carolina are expected to be eligible for assistance under the program in pursuing their college courses, or non-college courses leading to gainful employment, J. D. DeRamus, Manager of the North Carolina Veterans Administration Regional Office, said today.

Extension of the program to children other than those of deceased service-connected veterans has been in effect only since July 7 when President Johnson signed the new law.

The new law extends the program to children of veterans of the Spanish-American War, World War I, World War II, the Korean Conflict and the peacetime service who have been permanently and totally disabled by illness or injury attributable either to their wartime service or, in the case of peacetime veterans, to disabilities received in line of duty.

Eligible children receive benefits up to $110 a month for full time enrollment, and proportionately lower amounts for part time study, while pursuing their courses selected with the aid of counseling experts in the VA. Courses on the high school level are not permitted.

Age limits are set at 18 to 23, but in certain cases exceptions may be made. Handicapped children who may have to take special training may start at age 14. At the same time, studies may be pursued after age 23 in certain cases, like students who serve with the Armed Forces before their 23rd birthday. Marriage does not preclude participation by those otherwise qualified.

If the eligible person is of legal age he or she may file application with the VA Regional Office at Winston-Salem. If not, the parent or guardian must apply, DeRamus said.
