Well, I hope that everyone had a nice holiday weekend. I surely did. I spent the weekend with relatives and friends at Cedar Island, a small island just off the coast. The island has recently become famous as a vacation spot because of the Cedar Island - Ocracoke ferry which is located there. Of course, there was an unusually large group of tourists on hand for the 4th of July, partially because of the annual "Pony-Penning." Every year on the Fourth of July the islanders stage a roundup of the numerous wild horses which roam the area. Some of the horses are sold, and the remainder are set free at the end of the day. The event is very interesting to watch.

With the coming increase in ferry capacities, Cedar Island is expected to become even more popular as a vacation spot.

Even though the Fourth of July has passed, I would still like to mention the fact that the official name of this holiday is Independence Day. As everyone knows, it is a day which commemorates the signing of our Declaration of Independence. Yes, we all know this, but we sometimes tend to forget. It seems to me that with each passing year, less and less attention is paid to the real meaning of this day. In the world of today, I believe that is especially important that all Americans do everything possible to see that our nation remains "a government of the people, by the people, and for the people." Maybe it would be a good thing for all of us if we took a moment now and then to remember our national heritage.

Wonder...

What budding young teenager got a "rude awakening" last Sunday?

What Pollocksville girl has developed a sudden interest in skin diving?

HEARD: Betty Jo Hudson saying, "People!"

ALSO HEARD: Someone saying, "We weren't really going that fast; it just seemed that way!"
